Wall Street's Walpurgis Boom, Not Panic
Rebuking La Follette
A Real French Hero

Current Events
—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1924, by Star Company.)

WALL STREET, following the election, has been indulging in a series of Walpurgis nights, only the exciting scenes occurred in broad daylight. On Thursday, with Coolidge's election sure, the stock boom started, and it has gone on increasing day by day. Bulls that have taken their profits have had no effect on the rise. And they have, Job-like, "cursed their day," and themselves, for selling.

LAST SATURDAY, 500,000 shares were sold in thirty minutes, a record for all time. Such selling would mean 5,000,000 shares in a regular five-hour session of the Exchange. In Saturday's two-hour session before noon, 1,388,105 shares were dealt in. And the thing, apparently, is only starting.

MANY, UNFORTUNATELY, will wake up later with a bad financial headache, and many, buying beyond their power to digest, will have to begin all over again. That always happens, in stock booms or land booms. Only the really wise get rich, and stay rich, at ANYTHING.

THERE is one pleasant feature of the extraordinary stock transactions. They are based on a BOOM, not on a PANIC. Hitherto such a market of violent dealings has never been seen except in time of great panic, with frightened owners throwing their stock overboard, at any price.

THE GREAT rise and boom has been in railroad stocks. This writer, having advised readers on the day after election to buy railroad stocks, wisely, feels bound to advise the little man, most earnestly, that the quickest road to the poorhouse is stock trading on a margin.

IF YOU can pay half, or even a quarter now, and are absolutely certain of your ability to pay the rest later, go ahead. But GAMBLING in stocks—or anything else—means certain ruin, not sometimes, but ALWAYS.

All stock market records have been broken in this "Coolidge boom," and, when the dust settles, a few will have more yachts; the majority will have more experience.

It's all part of providential wisdom. The man with money gone must go to work at something more constructive than watching the ticker.

THE "CONSERVATIVE NEWSPAPER," a polite euphemism for "corporation owned newspaper," now calls for "discipline of La Follette." Half a dozen such newspapers suggest that Senator La Follette be removed from important Senate committees on which he is now active.

For his effrontery in saying what he thinks and running for office in a supposedly "free country," he is to be punished by an unfair and cowardly majority.

THAT PROGRAM will probably NOT go through. Mr. Coolidge possesses both common sense and decency. He will remind the Senators, if they need reminding, that running for office and speaking your mind is not a crime at least in the case of a powerful United States Senator. Where little people, without friends or power, are concerned, our glorious constitution is sometimes a little weak in its fundamental guarantees. But a man with the State of Wisconsin and 5,000,000 votes behind him will not be "disciplined" in the Senate, even to oblige the most servile of corporation lackeys.

THERE is much talk about "the great rebuke to La Follettism" in the election. What about the rebuke to Morganism?

John W. Davis, fresh from the

19 OTHER ARRESTS IN MAINE TOWN

All Made on Secret Indictments Charge Huge Rum-Running Conspiracy

Bangor, Me., Nov. 10.—A woman temperance worker, her husband, who is a prominent lumber operator; a sea captain, a Machiasport justice of the peace, and other men prominent in business and social circles in several Maine towns and cities are under arrest charged with implication in a vast rum running conspiracy.

Federal agents say that they have uncovered one of the most far-reaching conspiracies in the history of the State and that an evidence against those arrested is revealed the State will be rocked by a scandal.

The woman, charged with being one of the leaders in the alleged conspiracy, is Mrs. Laura Patten, a lecturer on temperance subjects and said to be president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union in her home town, Machias. Her husband, also under arrest, is Lorenzo J. Patten, wealthy lumber man. The sea captain is William H. Hicks, master of a schooner of Eastport.

SEIZED ON INDICTMENTS.

The indictments on which the arrests were made were returned Saturday and the round-up of prisoners began Saturday afternoon. Some of those indicted were taken from a dance in a Grange hall in Machias. Others were taken from their homes when officers entered their bedrooms late at night.

U. S. District Attorney Fred R. Dyer charged today that Captain Hicks is the leader of the alleged conspiracy and that it will be shown the plot for the distribution of smuggled liquor has ramifications in every port from Eastport to Bar Harbor, with prominent citizens involved in nearly all places.

Four hundred cases of liquor have been smuggled into Maine ports every month by Captain Hicks' schooner, it is alleged, and this cum has been distributed in small quantities by those involved in the plot.

OTHERS ARRESTED.

Among the others under arrest here today are: George Hausen, a justice of the peace, of Machiasport; Joseph Mitchell, said to be a ship's officer, of Eastport; Carroll Powers and his brother, Joseph Bowers, Millard Gardner, Edward Flynn, George Flynn, and John Marierall, of Machias; Frank R. Crocker of Machiasport, Charles Wilson and Audrey

EX-BANKER DIES BY POISON

Morris Maybush Had Long Brooded Over Collapse of Tremont Trust Company

An unidentified poison, supposedly self-administered, caused the death today of Morris Maybush, forty years old, former director of the now defunct Tremont Trust Company.

The police are investigating the sudden and mysterious death. It is recalled that seven months ago Maybush attempted suicide by inhaling illuminating gas.

The former bank director became violently ill early today at his home, No. 16 Westminster road, Roxbury. Mrs. Maybush attempted to help him but his condition rapidly became worse. She summoned a physician and an ambulance was sent from the City Hospital, to which Maybush was rushed. At the hospital it was determined Maybush died on the way from his home. The examining physicians were puzzled at the nature of the drug, undoubtedly a poison, that caused death.

TRIED SUICIDE BEFORE.

Last April Maybush received attention at the City Hospital after he had breathed much gas into his lungs, and narrowly escaped death. An investigation showed he had attached a rubber tube to a gas jet, placed the other end in his mouth and then turned on the gas. Recalling the fumes, Mrs. Maybush forced the door open and found him lying in a semi-conscious condition on the floor. He recovered after being treated for a few hours at the hospital.

Ever since the crash of the Tremont Trust Company early in 1921 the former director had been melancholy and subject to spells of brooding, his friends declare.

ONCE PROFESSOR.

Previous to the seizure of the bank by Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen Maybush had been prosperous, having a controlling interest, it is said, in a printing establishment. The failure of the bank affected his fortunes and the fortunes of many of his friends. Like many others, he was optimistic at first, believing an auditing of the accounts of the institution would justify an early reopening.

When an accounting showed the true condition of the Tremont Trust Company and when protracted litigation came instead of a quick settlement, Maybush was bitterly disappointed. His personal loss in the bank and the losses of his friends preyed upon him and affected his health.

REMAINED MOODY.

Members of his family and business associates endeavored to get him to forget the unfortunate bank affair and to plunge into business to recover his financial losses.

CAMBRIDGE FUNERAL FOR LODGE

Services to Be Held at Christ Church, Wednesday; Burial in Mt. Auburn

Funeral services for Senator Henry Cabot Lodge will be held at Christ Church, Cambridge, Wednesday, at noon.

Bishop William Lawrence will officiate.

Burial will be in the family lot at Mt. Auburn cemetery.

This announcement was made after a conference of the family today.

Thus Cambridge will have been the scene of the start and the finish of the career of this great statesman. It was in Cambridge that he received his college training to fit him for his life work. It was in Cambridge that he died, and his family decided it was fitting that the funeral services be held in the same city.

When the mourners have turned away and the last spadeful of earth is spread over his grave, he will be lying in Cambridge soil.

Body at Bigelow Home

The body today lies in the home of his Harvard classmate and lifelong friend—Mr. William S. Bigelow at No. 56 Beacon street.

The Bigelow home was the "second home" of Senator Lodge. The Nahant leader and Dr. Bigelow were classmates at Harvard, both graduating in the class of 1871. The friendship which ripened in student days continued throughout the lifetime of the Senator. When in Boston late at night, he frequently went to the Bigelow home instead of going to Nahant.

Governor Cox and other State officials have suggested that the body of the distinguished son of Massachusetts lie in state in the rotunda of the State House. This question will be decided upon at a conference of members of the family later in the day, but it is understood that the immediate family prefers that only simple and unostentatious services be held at the Bigelow home. The body will be interred in the Lodge family plot at Mount Auburn Cemetery.

Coolidge Informed

Word that Senator Lodge was dead, caused profound sorrow in Washington. President Coolidge, who was aboard the Mayflower on a cruise down the Potomac, was given the news as quickly as possible by naval wireless.

President Coolidge today designated Secretary of War John W. Weeks to represent him at the funeral of Senator Lodge. The stress of official business will prevent the President from attending the funeral. Carroll Addobbati Aldrich, the late senior's grandson, will accompany Secretary Weeks, as will all members of the Cabinet now in Washington.

State House to Be in Mourning for Senator Lodge

Governor Cox today issued a proclamation calling upon the people of the Commonwealth to adopt appropriate methods of showing their respect for Senator Henry Cabot Lodge.

The State House and all other State offices will be closed for one hour during the funeral, and flags on all State buildings will be at half staff until the body of the statesman has been laid to rest.

ROSS, ON SICK BED, MARRIES RICH WIDOW

Donald J. Ross, probably the best known golf architect in America was married on his sick bed to Mrs. Florence S. Blackinton, wealthy Framingham widow it was learned today.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Walton H. Doggett, at the palatial home of Mrs. Blackinton on Salem End road, Framingham Centre, where she is nursing her new husband back to health.

Last Monday marriage licenses were issued to the couple in both Newton and Framingham, following a waiver of the five-day law by Judge Edward W. Hodgett of Framingham.

CEREMONY DEFERRED.

On Thursday Mrs. Blackinton announced that Ross, whose home is at No. 102 Beacon street, Newton Centre, was too ill for the ceremony to take place.

His illness had spoiled plans of the couple to steal a march on their friends and be married, after which they were to take a honeymoon trip to Pinehurst, N. C.

Mrs. Blackinton told the newspapermen the marriage was originally planned for Monday, but a sudden turn for the worse in the condition of the golf architect had necessitated a postponement.

On Friday, however, Ross apparently having rallied, the minister was called in and the couple were made one. As soon as Ross has sufficiently recovered they will start for South.

EACH HAS CHILD.

Mrs. Blackinton is 44 years old and has one child, a son, John R. Blackinton. Her husband died more than two years ago, leaving her $76,500, with provision for the care and education of the boy. When the latter is twenty-one property is to be divided equally.

Ross is a widower with one child, his wife having died more than a year ago. Recently he sublet his Newton home in preparation for his annual trip South. He laid out a $1,000,000 golf course at Pinehurst.

His fame as a golf architect is international, and it is said he commands fees of $1,200 a day. One of the local golf courses laid out by Ross is that at the Belmont Springs Country Club.

NEW FACTS IN TRAVERS MYSTERY

Chemist's Analysis Reveals Man Was Dead Before Body Was Thrown in the River

New and startling developments today in the murder at Whitefield, N. H., of James J. Travers, former Knights of Columbus officer and enemy of the Ku Klux Klan, were:

Prof. Kingsford of Dartmouth College, state chemist, reported that Travers was dead when his body was thrown into the water of Johns River, where it was found last week.

The State chemist declared that examination of the body indicates death was caused by poison, and that it is believed it was given to to him in the liquor after he left Emile Dubey early last Wednesday.

Accidental death and suicide theories are eliminated.

Two or more men carried the body from the Travers home to the log boom where it was found.

A submerged log prevented the corpse from sinking deeper than two feet in the water.

HOLLOWAY QUESTIONED.

Carl Holloway of Carroll, N. H. arrested in Lynn as a fugitive from New Hampshire is held in connection with the Travers death mystery and has failed to satisfactorily explain several circumstances connecting him with the presence at the scene from which Travers disappeared.

Holloway has a police record and is said to have terrorized the residents of Two Mountain, N. H., causing them to remain silent and not expose his alleged rum-running activities during the past year.

Two school teachers of the town have come forward since his arrest with statements that he once shot at them to frighten them into silence when he believed they were about to report him to the police.

Holloway, on the other hand, protests his innocence.

Seen in his cell at Lynn police headquarters, where his wife from whom he had been separated had come to his aid, Holloway said he was not a Klansman and never injured anyone or anything.

Mrs. Holloway, who lives at No. 53 Pearl street, Lynn, declared that although she could not live with her husband, he "is the best man in the world."

Holloway has been living in Carroll, N. H. He had been expected in Lynn for three weeks, as divorce proceedings on the ground of incompatibility are pending.

"I am not a member of the Klan and the only meeting I ever attended at which it was discussed, was in a Whitefield church when the pastor spoke of the Klan's activities," said Holloway.

"I know nothing of the death of James Travers."

Ellsworth, 15 years and Mary 12 years, live with Mrs. Holloway, while a third daughter, Mrs. Raymond Trask, lives at No. 4 High street.

Holloway is said to have been seen in his auto near the home of Emile

GAMBLERS ARE HELD UP AND $5000 TAKEN

Westfield, Nov. 10.—State and local police today began an investigation of reports of an affair made here early Sunday morning in which several masked men held up a game party of ten near this city and at the point of shotguns went through seven men and took money said to amount to $5,000.

The holdup men went away in an automobile after emptying the cars of the alleged gamblers and are believed to have come toward Connecticut on the Kelleys highway.

The office of District Attorney Wright has been notified and has begun an investigation.

Three motor cars are said to have been made available for the use of the robbers. Residents of the section on the holdup road said today that at least part of the gang were known and threats of reprisals were voiced.

MOTHER IN JAIL, BABY IS BURNED TO DEATH

South Windham, Me., Nov. 10—Mrs. Cyril Karansky of this town is serving a four-months sentence in the county jail for selling liquor. While she is in jail, the care of her two-year-old daughter and another member of her household has been left to their father. Occupants of a passing auto saw flames in the Karansky home. They found the two-year-old baby in its crib enveloped in flames from an open lamp.

The baby was dead when it reached the hospital. In the next room Cyril Karansky, the father slept peacefully.

JAILED FOR BREAKING LIQUOR INJUNCTION

Selling liquor after a Federal judge had enjoined him from ever again handling the kinds of liquor he was convicted of selling in violation of the Volstead act, Cyril Karolsky was arrested about a month ago, charged with violating the Volstead act. Last week he was arrested again on a similar charge. He was given until Wednesday to arrange his affairs for his stay in jail.

SENATOR LODGE'S BODY LIES IN DR. BIGELOW'S HOME

FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS TO BE MADE TODAY

ton are expected to announce the personnel of the committees of the two law-making bodies that will attend the obsequies, today.

At Nahant the residents today are paying a solemn tribute to the memory of their most distinguished citizen. Starting 6 a. m. and at fifteen-minute intervals throughout the day the bells on the town buildings are being tolled.

Family at Bedside

The Nahant council will meet in special session tonight to take action on the death of Senator Lodge. Official representatives will be selected to attend the funeral services of the Senator.

The death of Senator Lodge at the Charlesgate Hospital was peaceful. Hours earlier it was evident to those in attendance on the stricken statesman that death was at hand.

There was also little convulsive move of the features—a low, sharp intake of breath and then all was still in the sick room. The end had come.

At the bedside when Senator Lodge died were his grand-daughter, Helena Lodge, and daughter-in-law, Mrs. John Ellerton Lodge. Mother and daughter, who reside in Washington, came to Boston on Friday, immediately after news of the serious illness of the Senator was telephoned them.

Down stairs, in the hospital, were John Ellerton Lodge, a son, and Henry Cabot Lodge 2nd, and John David, grandsons.

Dr. Cunningham, Mrs. Lodge and her daughter, descended from the death chamber and told those awaiting below of the end.

Senator Lodge had no interest in business. His came from an old and distinguished Massachusetts family which made a fortune in the days when clipper ships sailed out of Salem in the East India trade.

His father left him a sufficient fortune so that he did not have to work for a living. His estate will probably be in the vicinity of a million dollars.

The Senator never cared to increase his fortune. It was invested in bonds and the most conservative securities. He had a magnificent summer place in Nahant and his house on Massachusetts avenue, Washington, was comparatively modest.

As scholar, politician and statesman, Senator Lodge has left marks on American life and America can chronicle which will not readily be erased.

There were few public questions to which he remained indifferent; few national or international controversies in which he did not express himself forcibly, clearly and powerfully.

In the forming of American foreign policy he was ever a potent factor and at times he was supreme.

It was as a scholar and a man of means and leisure that Lodge entered politics. But it was as a politician that he remained.

Born in a sphere which left a life of idleness open to him, he turned away from it. He despised an amateur.

Never An Amateur

"The first thing a man of leisure has to do, if he wishes to count in his day and generation, is to avoid being an amateur," he said to his friends.

Whatever else he may have been, Lodge was not an amateur in politics. Having gotten into the game, he played it hard and brilliantly, to win. He had the American desire to win. Massachusetts, at half a dozen convention cities, they have called to memorize his genius for political leadership.

Boston was his birthplace. He was born here on May 12, 1850, the son of John and Anna Cabot Lodge. On both sides of the house he was of old New England stock.

For many years he has lived in Nahant, where his appearance as moderator of the town meetings has made the village government of nation-wide interest.

At the age of twenty-one he was graduated from Harvard University and entered the Harvard Law School. The degree of Ph.D. was conferred on him by Harvard for his thesis on "The Land Law of the Anglo-Saxons."

At twenty-three Lodge was sitting in the editorial chair of the North American Review. That publication in addition did suffer, for it lacked the dignity and scholarship. In the hands of the future senator that reputation did not suffer.

But he was not satisfied with the literary life alone. In the years that followed he resumed his study of law and was admitting to the Massachusetts bar. Then he went back to Harvard as an instructor of history.

Editor Again

He returned to the literary field later, and for a short time as associate of John Torry Morse, Jr., in the conduct of the International Review. As an editor he inclined to turn his brilliant, restless mind upon international questions. That tendency survived his transformation into a practical politician. Interested in all questions, Lodge used to the very end to specialize in the matter of foreign relations.

The young editor began to write books. It was a habit that lasted him through life. His first was "Life and Letters of George Cabot." It was put out in 1877. George Cabot was Mr. Lodge's great grandfather and a United States Senator from Massachusetts from 1791 to 1796.

In 1880 Lodge won a seat in the Massachusetts House of Representatives. His record was full of promise, but not startling.

In 1883 he went to Congress, and he realized that he was at home.

He was made, when he got to Washington. His years in the Massachusetts House of Representatives had given him a ready tongue and the capacity for drawing upon his store of knowledge and information on a minute's notice. From 1887 to 1893 Lodge was a powerful factor in the Lower House.

Then he was chosen to succeed Henry L. Dawes in the United States Senate. Until then George Frisbie Hoar was the New England leader in the Senate. His ascendancy was taken over by the younger man.

Senator Lodge became one of the Senate leaders as soon as he entered that body. He was chairman of the Committee on the Philippines for many years and later became chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The last post he made the most important of his long career. Under his intelligent handling, it was more than some executives ever intended or wished it to be.

The Committee on Foreign Affairs under Lodge's guidance handled more than 300 treaties, and in the forming and adoption of some of them the Sage of Nahant stood all but alone some times.

Although he was regarded as bitterly opposed to President Wilson, which he was, he frequently went to the support of legislation dear to Wilson's heart. When Wilson fought for the repeal of the Panama Canal Hill toll revision, the Massachusetts Senator fought side by side with him.

During the dark days of the world war, Lodge was foremost in upholding the President's hands.

But in the days of reconstruction that followed, party lines were drawn tight and the feud between the man in the White House and the man at the head of the table in the Committee on Foreign Affairs was renewed.

Wrecks League Treaty

Lodge fought the League of Nations project with all the fire and power at his command. He denounced in strong terms many clauses of the treaty Wilson brought back from Paris.

In 1919, the Senate refused to ratify the treaty and Lodge did more than any man or set of men to bring such a situation about.

The Senator insisted on reservations which the President said would "cut the heart out" of the treaty.

When time shall write its final estimate of Lodge, it must turn for its most colorful passage to the story of that strange twist of circumstance which set his name against the name of Woodrow Wilson in one of the stirring periods of American history.

Both outstanding men of letters, called by some the two greatest American examples of the scholar in politics, the venerable Senate leader and the wartime President found themselves in disagreement, determined and irreconcilable, at the very time of their most virile public service.

Mr. Lodge's seat was not seriously threatened until the campaign of 1910, when several candidates presented themselves for the Republican nomination and made a bitter fight upon him.

They charged he had built up a powerful machine to control party affairs in Massachusetts. He secured the nomination and was re-elected by a margin of six votes to the Massachusetts Legislature. He was re-elected in 1916 for a term expiring 1923.

In 1922, seeking re-election, Lodge was faced with determined opposition both within and without his party. In the primary campaign Joseph Walker ran against him. Walker attacked him as reactionary and no longer fit to represent Massachusetts in the Senate. When the primary votes were counted, though, Lodge was found to be an easy winner.

To oppose him in the election, the Democrats nominated William A. Gaston, lawyer and banker.

The vote was close. There was a recount. It showed Lodge elected by a plurality of 1,536.

IN U. S. SENATE THIRTY-ONE YEARS

DEMOCRATS TO FIGHT G. O. P. FOR LODGE SEAT

Will Test Constitutionality of Law Which Gives Governor Power to Appoint

A bitter legal battle over the appointment of a successor to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge looms on the political horizon.

Leading Democrats are preparing to test the constitutionality of the state law which gives the Governor power to fill a vacancy in the Senate until the "next biennial election."

The law was passed by the Legislature in February, 1922, partly to save the expense of a special election and partly to retain representation at all times.

While not disputing the right of the legislature to vest the Governor with appointive power, the opposition points out that Article 17, amendments and additions to the Federal Constitution, specifically states that any appointment must be a "temporary" one.

ELECTION FAR OFF.

They call attention to the fact that the next biennial election in Massachusetts is in November, 1926, and that any appointee of the Governor under the present law would serve for two years, or one-third of a regular term.

"It requires some stretch of the imagination to reconcile a two-year appointment with that term 'temporary'," said one leader today. "It is clearly an evasion of the plain intention of the amendment."

Speaker B. Loring Young of Weston is being mentioned as the most likely candidate to be picked by the Governor as successor to Lodge.

PROMISE TO YOUNG.

A well-founded rumor has been in circulation for months to the effect that William M. Butler, chairman of the Republican National Committee, promised the next vacancy to Young as a reward for Young's promise not to enter the primary fight against Gillett.

"One of the Great Men of Our Time," Says Coolidge

Washington, Nov. 10.—Public men of all stations joined today in expressions of grief and regret at the death of Henry Cabot Lodge.

President Coolidge as soon as he reached the executive offices received a message of sympathy from deceased relatives and designated Secretary Weeks and Captain Adolphus Andrews, the President's naval aide, to represent him at the funeral.

In a formal statement the President declared Mr. Lodge had been "one of the great men of our time."

"Senator Lodge was a prominent figure in Massachusetts before I knew anything about the public affairs of that Commonwealth," the President said. "For a long time he had been our senior senator. He was the floor leader of the Senate.

"This is not the occasion to undertake to review the positions he fulfilled and the work he has done. It is enough now to recall that he has been one of the great men of our time. He had a wide scholarship and a wonderful facility of expression. His influence has been world-wide. A large collection of his writings and speeches are left to us which will be not only of historical interest, but of permanent literary value.

"Full of year, bearing the honors that have never ceased to be bestowed in increasing number, he has been gathered to his fathers."

dwelt upon the Tremont Trust Company, with closed doors, and upon the disappearance of the funds he entrusted to the bank.

Then in April of this year came a suicide attempt. It was unsuccessful. The police believe that early today he made certain of ending his troubles by swallowing a large dose of poison.

NEW YORK CRIMINALS DEFY 'DEAD LINE'

New York, Nov. 10.—While new police deadline regulations were going into effect for the protection of shopping districts against the annual pre-holiday crime wave, bandits held up and robbed a subway station-master in the heart of the "white light" district, of $250, while another gang blackjacked and robbed an aged man and his housekeeper of a $5,000 diamond ring.

Three other attempted safe-cracking and holdups were frustrated by the police, a total of nine men being arrested, in each case after running gun battles.

AIR PROPELLER SENDS BOAT 87 MILES AN HOUR

Paris, Nov. 10.—A hydroglider—a flat boat equipped with a 400-horse-power motor and aerial propeller—sailed by M. Fischer, yesterday broke the world's record for this class of craft, attaining a speed of a little over 140 kilometers (nearly 87 miles) an hour. The run was made over a course of 1,000 meters on the Seine below Paris.

Born to Leisure, Sen. Lodge Elected Career of Work

BORN to a life of leisure, had he wanted it, Henry Cabot Lodge crowded tremendous physical and mental activity into his long career.

Graduated from Harvard and Harvard Law School, he received honors and degrees from Harvard, Williams, Yale, Clark University, Amherst, Union College, Princeton, Dartmouth and Brown.

As an editor, he presided over the fortunes of the North American Review from 1873 to 1876, and the International Review from 1879 to 1881.

As an author, he wrote "Life and Letters of George Cabot," "Short History of the English Colonies in America," "Life of Alexander Hamilton," "Life of Daniel Webster," "Studies in History," "Life of Washington," "History of Boston," "Historical and Political Essays," "Speeches," "Hero Tales From American History," "Certain Accepted Heroes" and other essays in literature and politics, "Story of the Revolution," "Story of the Spanish War," "A Fighting Frigate and Other Essays," "A Frontier Town and Other Essays," "One Hundred Years of Peace," "Early Memories," "Democracy of the Constitution" and other addresses.

As a scholar, he lectured at Harvard and Lowell Institute; was regent of the Smithsonian Institute, member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters and the Massachusetts Historical Society, president of the Harvard Alumni and overseer of Harvard University.

POISON KILLED KLAN FOE

Dubey, the last man known to have seen Travers alive, at the time when a party of men attempted to break into the home of Dubey early Saturday morning.

The motive behind the attempted entrance to Dubey's home is as mysterious as the death of Dubey's friend, Travers.

The Carroll, N. H., man is wanted for an account of what he saw transpiring in the little feud-ridden town of Whitefield, and only a tentative charge of attempting to break and enter has been placed against him.

Overnight developments in the case reveal that Travers secured a permit to carry a revolver on August 9 last. His reason was not because of any threats by the Klan, but because of the night trips he was forced to take in his automobile, it is said.

29 GET GUN PERMITS.

Twenty other residents of Whitefield, a town of 2,000, however, were recently granted permits to carry revolvers—but apparently their reason was more inspired by the enmity that only exists in Coos County between the Ku Klux Klan and their opponents. All of these permits were being checked up today.

Deputy Sheriff Colbath expects that the four hunters who left for the Canadian border in an auto about the time Travers met his mysterious end will return on Tuesday. They will then be questioned by County Solicitor Ryan. Conflicting stories have been told about their movements on the fatal morning.

POISON IN WHISKEY.

While subpoenaing Travers from the altar of St. Matthew's Church, the Rev. D. E. Gorman, rector, deplored the attempts of certain groups of men to take the law into their own hands, and called upon all good citizens to observe the law to the letter and permit it to take its own course in safeguarding the interests of all.

County Solicitor Matthew J. Ryan now awaits written confirmation of the surprising verbal report made by State Chemist Kingsford.

The chemist made a careful examination of the organs taken from Travers' body before deciding that the man was dead before being put into the water.

While the cause of death has not yet been definitely ascertained, it is evident that it was poison, probably administered in whiskey.

The formation of logs in the boom on the banks near the dam in the Johns River makes it impossible for one man to traverse them carrying a heavy burden, like the body of a man. Two or more men must have aided in disposing of the body, declare the authorities.

It was probably surmised that the body would sink and be covered as the stream shifted the logs. But a hardwood log was sunken in the water where the body was tossed and this log held it up so that it could be seen easily from shore. The position of the body in the water indicated that it was thrown there and that Travers did not fall from the boom.

When Emile Dubey, neighbor of Travers and the last man to see him alive, said "good night" to him he had not been drinking, it is asserted. Then, say the investigators, some one must have entered the garage and produced poison liquor.

CAME TO SEE WIFE.

The police of Lynn and of Whitefield are suspicious of Holloway's coming to Lynn so hurriedly when the investigation of Travers' death began. In his cell at police headquarters he maintained innocence of any connection with the death of Travers. He asserted that he had come to Lynn to see his wife, Mrs. Marion Holloway of No. 52 Pearl street, and his married daughter, Mrs. Id Trask of No. 4 High street.

The police point out that he has been separated from his wife for more than a year and apparently there was no friendship between the couple. They also point out that when Holloway arrived in Lynn he did not go to his wife's home but went to a lodging house at No. 22 Willow street.

Mrs. Holloway and Mrs. Trask have added to the mystery of the case by coming out in defence of the man and stating that he was invited to Lynn in a letter written by Mrs. Trask.

MADE QUICK TRIP.

Questioning that statement, the police say they have information that on last Friday night Holloway was seen in Lynn and Salem, that he drove his automobile to Twin Mountain, arriving there early Saturday morning, and then suddenly made a decision to return to Lynn. He packed some personal effects into his car and drove back to the Willow street house.

At noon today the man was questioned by County Solicitor Ryan of Berlin and Deputy Sheriff Colbath of Whitefield.

WOMAN AND 19 MEN HELD AS RUM-RUNNERS

W. C. T. U. Leader Among the Prisoners Accused in a Huge Maine Plot

Reynolds of Lubec, J. J. Wellington Crosby, Lubec; Victor Rosel, Cherryfield.

All may be arraigned before a United States Commissioner here today.

For many weeks, according to the Federal district attorney, government agents have been watching the movements of the schooner commanded by Captain Hicks and they have bought quantities of liquor from persons whom no one would suspect of complicity in a whiskey selling conspiracy.

The gathering of evidence was done over a broad territory. After this evidence had been presented to the Grand Jury and the indictments returned several officers were sent out in automobiles.

DRAGGED FROM BEDS.

They covered about 500 miles at high speed to arrest all those wanted before an alarm could be spread.

There was great excitement when several officers invaded the Grange Hall in Machias and stopped a dance to take a number of persons from the floor.

Rural communities were excited when the officers aroused sleepers by demanding admittance to darkened houses, taking men from their beds.

It is rumored that the nineteen arrests made are only the beginning of a campaign to clean up a widespread conspiracy and that scores of arrests may follow.

Boatmen who are alleged to have helped land liquor from Captain Hicks' schooner are now being sought at lonely points along the coast, according to the police.

Business, church and social circles will be amazed at the revelations to be made by Federal authorities in the prosecution of the alleged rum conspirators and scores of leading citizens from as many towns and cities are expected to crowd the Federal court when the cases are called.

ACCIDENT HOLDS UP NARROW GAUGE FERRY

Ferry service on the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Railroad was delayed for fifteen minutes early today by the dislodging of a rudder on the ferry Brewster.

The rudder pins were thrown out of their sockets when a heavy sea came, with considerable force, against the pilings of the slip on the Boston side. No passengers were injured.

PREACHER IN U. S. TO SOBER UP, FINDS NATION SOAKING WET

GETS JOB SERVING DRINKS

Scotchman Declares There's So Much Liquor That He's "Drunk Himself to Death"

By GRACE DES CHAMPS

"If the country is 'dry' now, thank God I didn't come over when it was wet."

He's a Scottish doctor-preacher who came over to a dry country to get sober. He flung himself onto a Salvation Army cot the other day after a year's battle with liquor and heroin.

Last night he got a job—and it was presiding over the drinks at a banquet.

But "Charley" MacPhail, erstwhile physician and preacher of the gospel for thirteen years in Dundee, Scotland, is going to win his fight in Boston and go back and tell the folks in Scotland that he learned to fight liquor in the United States.

DECORATED THREE TIMES.

"Can you beat it?" asks the man, wearily, who was a captain in the 42d Highlanders during the World War, thrice decorated and the star amateur entertainer of the British Expeditionary Forces.

"For seventeen hours at a time I've done hard manual labor so that I could sleep at night without the wretched craving for a drink or a shot.'

"Last night I took a night job to make a little extra money to send home. I was hauling out liquor at a banquet."

The man who came to America to sober up has gone to pieces. Friends he made in the Salvation Army have taken hold of him and he hasn't drunk for a week and a half.

But—his face is lined with the story of his "fight." It was one huge "spree" after another.

"Not in any city in Europe, except in France, where even the youngsters are drunk, have I seen as much liquor as in Boston," says MacPhail.

"I came over to find a 'dry' country, so that I couldn't drink. I've made a fool of myself. I've drunk myself to death, there's so much liquor!

"For thirteen years I was a preaching physician in Dundee. On Sunday mornings I preached in the Baptist Church. I enlisted when the war broke out and went to France with the 42d Highlanders.

"The night I won my commission they gave me a banquet. I took my first drink there. I never stopped drinking for the rest of the war. When I went home to my wife and children when the war was over, I concealed my habits for a year from them.

"THE U. S. WAS DRY."

"Then my wife found out. It went from bad to worse. "My profession was going and I was going with it. We held a council and decided that America was the best place to go. The United States was 'dry'—I couldn't get a drink if I wanted it!

"When they turned down my Continental diploma here, I got a job as steward on a Great Lakes boat. Every port we landed in was full of liquor and we took great quantities on board. Naturally I was drunk half the time.

"I extracted some teeth for a chap out West with cocaine and the crowd I was with suggested that we take some. I had worked with it all my life, but had never thought of it that way.

"It's better than booze!" someone said. And then I mixed heroin with my liquor.

"I landed in a hospital in Buffalo and a fellow patient and I got hold of more drugs there. Then I came to Boston.

"Alcohol and heroin—heroin and alcohol. That's been the story since I came. I'm not blaming America, you understand, but why call it prohibition?

"There's more liquor here than in Europe—except that it's worse!"

U. S. WORLD FLIERS ON WAY TO NEW ORLEANS

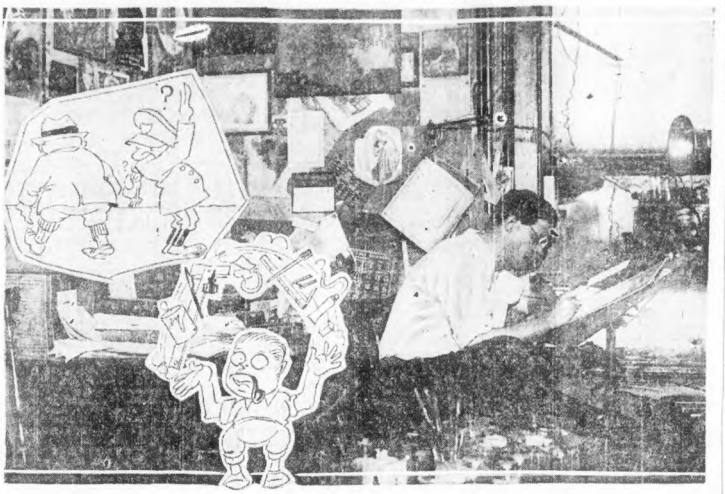
Started as Horse Thief, but Finds Greater Thrills in Art



GIBBS MASON IN HIS STUDIO WORKSHOP

Monotony Results From Overindulgence in Craving for Excitement, Says Gibbs Mason, Happy in Work

Once he wooed exciteiment by stealing horses; now he's getting new thrills daily out of art.

In a small studio on Tremont street there works with brush and oils Gibbs Mason, now known as the painter of the famous "Motor Girl."

When he was twelve years old Mr. Mason stole two horses in Nebraska and set out to join the famous Dalton Gang. His aspirations along lines of banditry received a brusque interruption long before they were realized when he was arrested as a "vicious character," and, being ill-advised, pleaded guilty and was sent to the reform school for seven years.

THERE'S THRILL IN ART.

"If you want a new thrill—look for it in art," is the advice he offers now. "In the sympathetic understanding of art there is an entirely unique pleasure. Monotony is a condition of mind resulting from overindulgence of the craving for excitement."

Many will recall the then-strange figure of a man who actually wore knickerbockers in business hours on Tremont street. This was long before scores of tobacco dealers, merchants and other tired business men had adopted the convenient garments for everyday wear and, needless to add, many mommas more women began to wear them, too.

That figure was the wandering artist, Gibbs Mason, and he ever seemed apparent of the high degree of excitement which he aroused.

GOT SEVEN YEARS.

It was from a farm 12 miles north of Lincoln, Nebraska, that Mason stole his first horse, he says. This he sold for $6, after riding it to a safe distance from its former home. With the money he bought a good meal and a pair of buckskin gloves—essential to the wardrobe of every efficient bandit in those days. Then he stole another horse and headed for Oklahoma and the Dalton Gang.

The lad had traveled ninety-five miles of the way, when weary and frightened, he was arrested in Manhattan, Kansas. He didn't quite know what the trial was all about and when someone told him that things would go easier with him if he pleaded guilty, he did so with alacrity. Then the blow fell—seven years in the State Reform School.

From the day when he was discharged from the school and provided with a suit of clothes and carfare to Columbus, Gibbs Mason has earned his own living through his ability with the brush. His first job was in a photo engraving plant where he received—and lived on!—$2.50 a week. He remembers the detailed figures clearly. It's not easy to forget them, he adds. Here is how he did it:

LIVED ON $2.50 A WEEK.

For a room, shared with another youth, he paid fifty cents a week. His laundry came to the same amount. At a particularly unwholesome and uninviting lunch counter he paid a dollar for a meal ticket for seven meals—one substantial meal or two appetite-teasers daily. This left fifty cents a week for extra food, amusement and similar luxuries. Of this ten cents went religiously each week to buy a "peanut gallery" seat in the theatre where Julia Arthur and Hershall Mayall got their start in stock. Through this medium of art and the drama he gained his first connected ideas of life and manners.

To earn a little extra money Mason made some sketches for a Democratic newspaper in the town where the engraving shop was located. He mad a portrait from a photograph of the daughter of a prominent politician which brought him $5 in cash and led to a better job.

But Mason had a bad case of wanderlust and didn't care to stay in one place for any length of time. So he set out once more, sometimes hiking, sometimes beating his way on trains—always, like little Tommy Tucker, able to manage to earn a meal by his talent.

TRAMP TILL 30.

Until he was thirty, Mason remained more or less a tramp. He did odd jobs for painters and sketched for half a dozen newspapers. From constant practice his work began to improve and he began to do magazine illustrating and cover designs. Then he won rather a name for portraits and staged two successful exhibitions in Baltimore which made it possible for him to go to Paris for study. Returning from the French capital he established himself in Boston.

A wonderer by nature, Mr. Mason has never stuck to one medium or style and the walls of his studio are closely hung with oils, pastels and water-colors, pencil and pen and ink drawings.

Close at hand to the easel in the window is a radio from which the artist derives keen enjoyment.

Mr. Mason regrets that Americans do not know more of the thrills which art holds.

PRINCESS SAYS SHE SPURNED MILLIONAIRE

New oYr. Nov. 11 (I.N.S.)—Coarse, narrow, unchivalrous old Mulberry street in the lower East Side was treated today to a taste of Western hot blood and gallantry when the case of "Sunshine Rider" or Princess Natalie Unkalunt, of the Cherokee Indian Nation, was called.

The Princess is accused of grand larceny by Mrs. Lucie Benedict, daughter of a Fifth avenue art dealer, George H. Ainslie. A brawl in the Magistrates court lobby preceded the trial and attained such proportions that court attendants had to separate the participants and J. A. Barbee of Muskogee, he Princess' brother-in-law, remarked that "if dishappointed out West there'd be some shooting."

The defendant testified that Ainslie urged her to visit his Summer home at Ardsley-on-the-Hudson after she previously had refused to return there because he proposed marriage to her. At last, she said, she yielded to his importunities.

"I decorated his home," the pretty little princess said wistfully, "with wild flowers and foliage from the Autumn hill. And I made him 15 gallons of sauergraut, peeled potatoe sand put up many jars of pickled peppers. He said the place was not the same without me."

"Sunshine Rider" was easily the prettiest thing in the dirty, tuffy little court, where it will be decided if she is to be held to the grand jury. Fawn was her color scheme. She wore a fawn hued tightly fitting dress, a fawn scarf, fawn sheer hose and a fawn toque.

Her shining black hair was more brilliant than the fur piece about her chront. "When Sunshine Rider" testified she spoke in prose, charte English. As a princess would, she spoke of the Cherokee lands as "my reservation."

The girl said she had thought Ainsle's alleged interest in her was inspired by a mutual interest in art.

"When I found out that he wanted to marry me," the princess testified, "I reminded him of the extreme differences in our ages so one of many reasons why I would not consider his attentions." She says he begged her not to let a proposal end their friendship.

200 WAIT IN VAIN FOR LOW AUTO PLATES

Today, the opening for the 1925 registration of motor vehicles, was unusually quiet at Commonwealth Pier.

Last year 7,000 persons swamped the opening hours with requests for the numbers between five and ten thousand.

This year numbers up to 10,000 are reserved for those who previously held them. The numbers from 10,000 to 100,000 are being handled through the mails, given out in the order applications are received. Numbers from 100,000 to 800,000 are being handled in the twelve sub-station registry offices.

Applicants for plates today in Boston got numbers above 300,000. About 200 autoists awaited the opening of the registry office, hoping to get 5,001, the first unreserved number for last year. But this year 5,001 went to Eli C. Smith of Audobon road, Boston, who had that plate last year.

No. 10,301, the first unreserved number for this year, went through the mail to Joseph M. Troy of Waban.

Frederick Tudor of Bay End Farm, Buzzards Bay, still holds No. 3. He has held it since 1903, the first year cars were registered.

Odd requests still trickle in. One man wants his plate to include his street number and his telephone number. Another would like to advertise his college class. Some people dislike to carry a thirteen and others beg for it. The plates so far made run up to 800,000.

MAN CONFESSES THEFT; HAD BRICK IN HANDBAG

Early today Patrolman Adair of the City Hall avenue station saw a man in the rear of a Washington street jewelry store, between School and Bromfield streets. In one hand he carried a clerical appearing bag. He fled on seeing the policeman, but Adair speedily captured him on Bromfield street. In the bag was a brick, neatly wrapped in newspapers. He gave his name as Ulysses Harding, a dishwasher.

The police say he admitted larceny of fur coats and other merchandise, and told them where the goods could be found.

BOSTON PRICES ON TURKEY MAY BE LOW

Expected Consumers Will Pay 45 to 50 Cents for Their Thanksgiving Bird

Thanksgiving turkey may be almost the same as last year—between 45 and 50 cents a pound retail, according to several wholesale and retail dealers in the market district today.

Reports have been received from buyers stating that there would be a large supply in the market, especially the Texas output, with the Minnesota and Michigan quantity not far behind.

Prices last year which started high, dropped a few days before Thanksgiving, when those who were buying in some into possession of turkey at a moderate

"It is too too early to make any definate announcement regarding price," said one dealer today. "The situation is always problematical at this time."

Another dealer said there has been a scarcity of Vermont turkeys which tended to advance prices to 75 cents a pound retail. The Vermont birds, he said, were as fine in quality, if not better, than those of any other section. Of late years, the Minnesota and Michigan dealers were taking a splendid quality of bird which approaches in flavor the famous Vermont product.

SLACKERS FAIL TO FIGHT FOR CITIZENSHIP

An expected silence on the part of some 250 alien wartime slackers to enter legal proceedings to force the Government to allow them to become naturalized tomorrow fell flat today in the Federal building when only 10 heralded of the slackers appeared, each without counsel.

For weeks there has been considerable talk and more anxiety in foreign language newspapers to the effect that these slackers would start a fight against the laws ruling that they cannot be naturalized until July, 1926.

The court has ruled that they cannot become citizens until five years after the end of the war. They declare that the war ended on Armistice Day. Congress officially ended the war 16 July, 1921.

Of the twenty before Judge Lowell today, two were allowed to become citizens. They were found to be subjects of Austria, or some country during the war.

RANDOLPH MAN HELD AS ONE OF ROBBER BAND

James Weeks, Said to Be a Rum-Runner, Fifth Taken in Wrentham Holdup

James A. Weeks of Randolph, the fifth man arrested in the attempted robbery at the National Bank of Wrentham, November 3, in which James E. Entwistle, aged cashier was shot and fatally wounded, was arraigned in Walpole District Court today on a charge of murder. He was held without bail for hearing November 18 when he will appear in Franklin Court with the four previously arrested.

Weeks, said by the police of Randolph to be a rum-runner and despatching himself on his business cards a "supercargo," was arrested near his home in an isolated section of North Randolph late last night. He had been living with a neighbor for some weeks.

The police charge that Weeks was one of the men who entered the bank. The others held are Alfred Bedard of Pawtucket, R. I., driver of the automobile in which the bandits fled, Manuel Pacheco and James Allugo of New Bedford and Fred Bedard, alias Maderios, of Seekonk. The last three names were captured in a raid in a bolshie house district of Providence early Friday. All five are held at Dedham jail.

The Carharts, who have taken an apartment in Manhattan this Winter, are leaders among the younger married contingent at Tuxedo Park, where they spend the greater part of the year.

The former "Dolly" Bliss was of the smart group which arranged the annual ball at Tuxedo Park last month. The affair was one of the most brilliant and successful affairs to be staged in the park.

THE officers of the Junior League are this afternoon keeping open house at the league's headquarters, No. 37 Commonwealth avenue. The occasion is to extend their welcome to the debutantes of the season recently elected to provisional membership in the league.

Those who will take their place in the receiving line this afternoon are Miss Sarah Winslow, the president; Miss Elinor Slafton, the vice-president, as well as Mrs. Charles W. Cheney and Miss Madeline Converse, treasurer and secretary respectively.

APROPOS of the debutante—one of the most youthful-looking of all the debbies is Miss Polly Palfrey, "under little girl with dark hair and brown eyes."

She is a Winsor School girl and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Palfrey of Brookline. On Friday Miss Margaret Warner gave a luncheon for her at the Chilton Club and next Saturday Mrs. James B. Ayer (Hannah Palfrey) is playing hostess at Milton way at a dinner in honor of Miss Palfrey.

AS for festivities occupying the "buds' attention early this week—Mrs. Charles A. Williams is giving a tea tomorrow at her Brookline home for her granddaughter, Miss Alfreda Payson. Gives Rules to Be Happily Married

MRS. ANNA B. ADOLPH

A Little Affection Is a Wonderful Thing, Says Women Expert on Happiness

Are you happily married? If not, why not?

Marriage equals love and love equals happiness. Therefore marriage equals happiness, since things equal to the same thing are equal to each other.

The wife who rebels against being "kitchen canary"—can you blame her? There's little happiness in being the unrivalled queen of the stove and the sink undisputed as the regal title may be. What's in a name, if you haven't the game?

And then again you can't blame the husband for saying unkind words when his spouse greets him, querulous, dissatisfied, and ill-looking.

The way to a man's heart is through his eyes for what he sees, only that does he believe. And when a nice and attractive wife, sweetly perfumed and brilliantly gay, passes the potatoes and pours the coffee, the husband rejuvenates as the lover and their marriage is a huge success.

HAPPINESS RULES.

In gospel form, Mrs. Anna B. Adolph, Boston happiness expert, declares that all marriages should and can be happy. And for the benefit of the unfortunate ones she advises as follows:

"From the forgetful husband to the neglected wife—some luscious sweets and roses.

"From the fretting wife to the patient husband—a catchy smile and a fashion-plate appearance at the next supper table."

Play the game of housework! Race yourself while washing, cleaning and cooking! Establish record time for doing your daily chores! Drive yourself over the line from use drudgery to house-pleasure!

Take the case of the nagging Mary and disgruntled John. She has washed and laundered baby's clothes all morning, illustrates Mrs. Adolph, prepared the luncheon and the dinner besides feeding the children, cleaning dishes, dusting and sweeping. She is cranky and revolting when husband comes home ready to be relieved of his mental fatigue and propped up in his anxiousness for home comfort. It is a sad picture awaiting him in form of drawn-out Mary. The result is disagreement fostered by expressed incompatibility and plenty of unhappiness. The natural end is a tale of divorce.

"ANALYZE YOURSELF."

My advice to the many Marys of Boston is this. Analyze yourself and your husband. Forget the house and its unpleasantness for the moment, but in reminiscence bring back the glorious days of romp and revel near the lake and the glorious moonlight. It is all in the attitude of mind. If you think you have the most wonderful husband in the world, if you see in him his ennobled self, happiness is yours for the mere asking.

Remember your husband as the lover of courting days. Don't demand excess attention from him. He has had an extremely busy day at the office and expects you to prop him up. Assert yourself when you wear a new gown or have your hair fixed prettily. He'll respond. Don't complain. It is never so bad that it couldn't be worse.

"Suggest a box of candy, a bunch of flowers, a telephone call now and then. Be a pleasant reminder of your husband. Let him know that all you want are the simple pleasures of life and that you are easy to satisfy. Let him know the woman he is married to. Don't keep yourself closed up in a shell, complaining when you are alone."

Mrs. Adolph suggests the following for assured marital bliss:

"Don't save your most attractive dress for a special occasion. Eating with your husband is most important of all.

"Look your best at meal time. Every woman is an actress. Assert your histrionic ability. It acts as a stimulating tonic for husband's jaded nerves.

"Retain your youth. A husband is mighty proud of a youthful wife. Men enjoy being told they have robbed the cradle.

"BE A COQUET."

"There is only one Herculean Adonis in the world. He is your husband.

"Practice coquetry a bit. Men appreciate the subtlety of it. Men want to be urged on so that they might assert themselves.

"Make you husband feel big and strong. Men like themselves in such roles."

And for the negligent husband Mrs. Adolph prescribes these:

"Comment on your wife's cooking. She should receive your satisfaction as does the restaurant.

"Talk to her at meal time. She speaks the same language you do.

"Be indulgent of her wishes, her whims and fancies. Remember she is only a woman.

"Don't annoy her with what you might avoid doing in her presence. Remove the cause and save the trouble.

A little affection is a wonderful bracer. Try it and see."

With this outline of marriage is there reason for its not being successful and happy?

FIVE WALTHAM STRIKERS FINED

Candidate for Mayor and Three Women in Group Guilty of Disturbance

Five Waltham Watch Company strikers were found guilty of creating a disturbance before the gates of the watch company when they appeared in Waltham Court, today. They were fined $5 each. An appeal to Judge Gibbs placed the cases on file.

Among the four was Howard Mayhew, who until a few days ago was a candidate for Mayor of the city of Waltham. He is secretary of the strikers' organization.

The others were Steven Thomas, Ella Berkengail, Agnes Darr and Martha Herold.

The five were arrested about a week ago when, the police say, they were at the gates hooting and yelling at workers entering the factory. The strikers plan to make a test case of it.

ARMISTICE DAY OBSERVANCE ON THE AIR

Department Commander Harlow of the Legion Is to Speak Over the Radio

Tomorrow is Armistice Day, the sixth anniversary of the close of the World War.

In Boston the event will be celebrated rather quietly. The action of the State Legislature in refusing to make the day a holiday in Massachusetts has curtailed many of the functions that have gone with the day in the past.

The American Legion Department Commander, Leo M. Harlow, will speak tomorrow evening on Armistice Day from station WBZ. Mrs. Carroll J. Swan will sing patriotic songs from the same broadcasting station. There will also be a double quartet by the Nolwood Post, American Legion, which will sing service war time songs, and the 19th Infantry Band from Fort Warren will play.

A world war memorial tablet will be unveiled at the Public Library at 11 a. m. It is a bronze tablet with

OCTOBER PRIZE AWARDS

By Martha Lee

OUR ambitions are realized! Not only did we go over the top of the 10,000 mark in our October Drive for new members, but we went with the impetus that carried us well over 14,000.

I know that each and every one of you are just as proud as I am of this splendid showing and I see tremendous possibilities in the good such a mass of intelligent interested women can accomplish for New England.

Below is a list of the prize winners and I want to congratulate each one personally on the splendid work which they have accomplished.

I know that in every case these new members were personally interviewed in accordance with conditions of the contest and each one of them is now an interested, earnest worker in our organization.

Word of Thanks

I want to say a word of thanks to the many other good members who also worked hard for their club even though their list of names was not large enough to be included in this prize winners. Even though you only sent in fifteen names it must be a real satisfaction to know that through your efforts 15 New England women will gain pleasure and benefit.

If you sent in a list in excess of the number shown against the prize winners, you will know that some condition of the contest was not complied with. All lists were carefully checked by letter or telephone and where it was found permission had not been secured to send in the names, the lists were necessarily disqualified.

Thank you all once more for your generous response.

Latest from Paris

Decidedly new and smart is the black velvet frock sketched at the left. It is one of CHERUIT'S new and most successful models and is deservedly so for it presents a number of interesting features of value from the style standpoint. The dominating note is found in the huge scarf which is twisted carelessly about the moderately low neckline and knotted at the front. There it falls to the knees, widening as it goes, and each end is lavishly embroidered in bright colored chenille. The gown itself, consists of a tunic almost full length, beneath the lower edge of which is glimpsed a bit of the narrow underskirt embroidered to match the motifs on the scarf. Is silhouette the tunic is flat at front and back, but at the sides, well below the hips, a decided flare is introduced and a most becoming line hereby obtained. The tiny sleeves so tiny as to scarcely merit the name are in one piece with the tunic and fit closely to the shoulders and upper arm.

One of the prominent notes of JENNY'S winter collection is the frequent use of the old-time "sailor collar." The black reps frock sketched at the right boasts this feature in a deep, square collar of the material bound with narrow black silk braid and trimmed with ornamental, if not useful, buttonholes of the braid. A close little scarf of rose gold lame, tying snugly about the throat, is attached at the back to the top of the sailor collar. The tube-like line of the frock is broken by the addition of two flat panels at front and back, respectively bound and ornamented like the collar.

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

(1) Is it proper for the bride to wear long white kid gloves with a short-sleeved dress at a Fall wedding? The bride will be dressed in white, but will not wear a veil. It will be a church wedding to take place in the morning.

(2) Is it correct for the groom, best man and ushers to wear gloves with plain blue or gray suits?

(3) What color tie would be best suited for the occasion? "R."

IT IS proper and is the most formal attire. But lately, as a matter of fact, gloves are not so much worn by either the bride or her attendants. At the most formal weddings lately I have noticed that the bride wears long white kid gloves, but that the bridesmaids (even with the very formal costumes) usually do not wear gloves. The two elements that determine whether or not the bride wears gloves are: First (and really more important) the fact that the harmony of the costume demands it; and, second, the formality of the wedding and of the wedding dress. But really the bride can do as she chooses and still be correct.

Since, in the case you mention, the bride is not wearing a veil and therefore is not dressing formally, I should advise her not to wear gloves.

(2) No. With these informal suits gloves would be out-of-place and inconsistent. They would emphasize the informality of the attire.

(3) A black silk four-in-hand, with a narrow white stripe, single or in groups, at narrow or wide intervals.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

In sending a birthday card to a friend, should one sign his name on the birthday card or enclose a personal card? K. B. L.

It is better to sign your name on the card. To enclose your visiting card seems too formal—doesn't it?

"The mail must be delivered!"

—and REM relieves this cough in time

"The Mail must be delivered." That's the motto of those gray-clad men who work so hard, so long and so loyally in their unfailing devotion to duty.

No matter what the weather, they collect and deliver your letters, risking their health so that schedules will be met on the dot.

Naturally letter-carriers get coughs often. Mr. H. F. McEachern of the Dorchester Centre P. O., Boston, wasn't overlooked when coughs were being passed around—but REM helped him to stick to his route.

"I don't need to tell you about a letter-carrier having to be out in all kinds of weather," says Mr. McEachern. "Rain or shine, snow or sleet, the mail must be delivered. Every winter I get wet and catch severe coughs. I had one this winter. It kept me awake coughing many a night.

"I saw REM advertised and said I guessed I'd try it. So on my way home I dropped into Suckernick's Drug Store, corner Blue Hill avenue and Havelock street, and got a bottle. I found relief in a couple of doses, and thought to myself: 'This is a real cough remedy.' I used to get up at night to take a dose. Whenever I feel hoarse now, or cough, I go for REM. A couple of my friends have used it with mighty good results, too. It got them back to work in a couple of days.

In this climate few of us are lucky enough to escape the usual bad-weather coughs. But though we can't escape them, we can help to get rid of them quicker. A bottle of REM has quieted many a cough.

A special ingredient in REM—effective, harmless—is not found in ordinary cough syrups. Clinging to your throat as it is swallowed, REM spreads a soothing, healing film over the sore, inflamed membranes.

No Opiates in REM. And pleasant to take.

Ask your druggist for REM—the blue package with the round orange label. And you can have your money back if you want it—but you won't!

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

THE young mother should watch which foods the baby relishes most, which foods and their quantity cause distress, and act accordingly.

The good health of a baby is largely a matter of intelligent attention to diet. Nevertheless, in spite of your efforts you will sometimes notice belching, flatulence, wind and symptoms of colicky pain.

Give half a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and thereafter vary the offending food. Syrup Pespin is a laxative admirably suited to infants and children, as it is mild and wholly free from opiates and narcotics.

Many thousands of mothers have never given their babies any other medicine but Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and they have successfully raised large and sturdy families. The formula is not a secret, being a combination of Egyptian senna with pepsin, and agreeable aromatics. The ingredients are stated on the package. Mrs. Dewey Walker, Elida, N. M., and Mrs. B. NORA LEE

A Story of Flaming Youth

Heart and Soul of 1924 Flapper Laid Bare in Best Story by Author of "Chickie"

START THE STORY HERE TODAY

Margaret Meadows married Will Lee at seventeen. His dissolute habits soon made her miserable. The night he raised his hand to his two-year old child in a drunken rage she slipped from his home with her baby. Margaret, supported her daughter by teaching school in several villages, finally settling in Fairdale, where she met Andrew Reed and they fell in love. But he was tied to an invalid wife and Margaret refused to let him leave her. Nora at 17 fell in love with Dane Herrick. Andrew's wife recovers and attacks him with a pistol. He says good-by to Nora Lee and gives her a packet of bonds. Andrew is killed in an auto accident, and his widow demands the bonds of Nora. Nora meets Maxwell Reed.

NOW CONTINUE THE STORY

THEY reached the Point. Across the narrow bay, dark and massive as an ancient fortress rose the wooded slopes of Sausalito—and beyond, as though it blocked the waters, were the lifted shoulders of Tanalapais hulking to the sky.

Seagulls, riding on a wave, rose abruptly—a flash of wings, a swoop against the hills—

Nora Lee took off her hat. The wind lifted her black curls, struck color into her sallow skin. She said, moodily: "I often thought I'd like to run into the hills and pull the top of them over me and never think again."

"It's not as hard as that—is it? And since you are to write, you must look more kindly at life. You can't fight shy of this and that, you know. You have to see life wisely or you don't see it at all."

She was excited now—listening as she had the night before. He was some traveler who had gone the highways and byways and was now throwing bright shells from many shores at her feet. She heard his drawling laugh.

He sat on the grass at her feet. He was now talking of Japan and the travels there. He was telling of the maids. They never kissed. Yet they loved. Had she read Pierre Loti? Loti was right. He did the dainty brown ladies as injustice. There was Madame Chrysanthemum, you know—

She said uneasily: "Ah—poor Madame Chrysanthemum!"

He glanced at her curiously, wondering at the sudden changes in her mood. Her eyes were now dreaming and filled with wistful tenderness.

He noticed the straight, rather heavy black brows—the wide, rippling red mouth. According to his standards could she be called beautiful—yet there was vivid charm and dash in her face. Her eyes, usually lowered, blazed out in a way that was startling; her mouth could clinch with fiery resolution.

Interest Piqued

He saw that she was younger in her emotions than in her mind. Her unawareness piqued his interest. He wondered what Nora Lee would do if she were suddenly violently angered.

He wondered what flashing rage would turn on him if he were to pull her suddenly toward him and kiss her. Wondering about this, he wished to do it, yet was quietly aware of contempt for himself that he had this wish to antagonize or hurt her.

She looked at him candidly and said: "I suppose you know all about life—all about love? One should, if they are to do great things."

A flush turned darkly on his cheeks. He ran his hand along her arm. She sprang to her feet, seeing the hotness in his eyes.

In a moment the tears would dash to her lids. She reached for her hat with a furious impatience. Without waiting for him, she started down the road.

The Insult

She went but a step. Maxwell Reed laid a hand brusquely on her arm. "I'm sorry. It was thoughtless. I really meant nothing. Please don't be angry—"

She wished to fling his hands off; turn with cold, biting insult and tell him to go. He was mistaken if he thought she was any idiotic little vamp and if he couldn't appreciate—

But at this point her eyes burned with furious, indignant tears. She dared not relax the grim set of her lips. She thought as she had when a child and the purple wisteria shivered and died: "I am a damn, damn world! It's a damn, damn world."

There was no use clinging to the hope of beauty; no use dreaming of exalted friendships. Men wanted nothing but this insipid flirtation. She had guilelessly imparted to him her ideals: her dream of a bright, utopian world where men and women were at last full-statured; where they had tossed away their little bags of tricks and met each other freely in a noble equality.

He answered with this warm, provocative look which said plainly: "Rave on, sweet innocent! Your charming face offsets your foolish tongue. Therefore I endure and discount it."

Told in a Look

He was not interested in her shining ambitions; her fiery scorns. Nora Lee felt like a child, who wishes to remain up conversing with her elders, but who is sent marching smartly to bed.

Well—she didn't require attention as Virginia did; she didn't hunger for it like Sallie. Suddenly she remembered how exhilarating his facile talk had been; what an exquisite voice he had; and that he had promised to introduce her to his brilliant circle where interesting people would recognize her unguessed talents.

The tears that had been stinging her lids crept to her lashes. Maxwell Reed noticed this. In the flashing sunlight their heavy fringe dropped wistfully on her high cheekbones like a veil of the ashamed, pathetic eagerness of her profile.

He felt mean and irritated by the stray impulse that had led him to mock her young sincerity. She was right. All the make-believe, all the jesting at love, had tracked this horrible furrow in his mind so that he could not look at a pretty woman without wishing to enmesh her in this light, subtle excitement. He had a zest for this type of adventure.

He remembered a night, years earlier, when he was about twenty. It was in a candy store. The girl who brought his soda was an exasperating thing, with large solemn eyes and a nebulous chin. He felt sorry for so cipherlike a creature. He smiled at her. She gave no response. He redoubled his gallantries, twitting her in an affable way. She remained mute. So when she laid his check on the table he squeezed her hand, patting it two or three times.

Shame Is Outcome

She turned on him a wondering look—a long, questioning gaze of wonder, that made him vaguely uncomfortable.

When he left the store he found her waiting. She was staring at a great heap of pink and white marshmallows pouring from a barrel in the window.

She sidled humbly toward him and slipped her hand on his arm. Her solemn eyes sought his and smiled.

He was overcome with shame. For he perceived that he one had noticed her before. In this realization his thoughtless act became a monstrous cruelty. He had caused her to come up and link her arm with a stranger, walk with him and smile.

He was convinced that she did not know where her steps were heading. And finding her eyes still fastened on his with a half-child pallor, he halted abruptly. He said: "Look here! You don't want to do a thing like this," and sweet off his hat (a cruel act, he realized) and with quivering lips at the corner.

He felt that he had committed a crime. He had stared her on the soul. Her large, sad eyes haunted him.

Remorse for such a wrong is but a good to fresh exploit for sin thrives on the tears of repentance. Regretting his villainy, the young man kept it alive in his thoughts. He followed the incident, filling in details. A sense of power exhilarated him. Because of a mere look a girl was willing to go wherever he wished.

That was long ago. His sensitiveness dulled as his adroitness sharpened.

JANICE MEREDITH

Thrilling Romance of the Revolution

MARION DAVIES, beautiful film star, appears as the heroine of this romance in Cosmopolitan Pictures' production, "Janice Meredith." The picture opens in Boston at the Majestic Theatre November 2.

A Red-Blooded American Girl's Struggle Between Honor and Love—Would Every Girl Take the Desperate Chances That Janice Took?

By PAUL LEICESTER FORD
Author of "The Honorable Peter Sterling," "The Story of an Untold Love," etc.

"ALONZO now once more found himself upon an element that had twice proved destructive to his happiness, but Neptune, now propitious and with gentle breezes wafted him toward his haven of bliss, toward Amaryllis. Alas, echo but one day from happiness, a Moorish echo—"

"Janice!" called a voice.

The effect on the reader and her listener, both of whom were sitting on the floor, was instantaneous. Each started and sat rigidly intent for a moment; then, as the sound of approaching footsteps became audible, one girl hastily slipped a little volume under the counterpane of the bed, while the other sprang to her feet, and, in a hurried, flustered way, pretended to be getting something out of a tall wardrobe.

Before the one who hid the book had time to rise, a woman of fifty entered the room and, after a glance, cried:

"Janice Meredith! How often have I told thee that it is ungenteel for a female to repose on the floor?"

"Very often, mommy," said Janice, rising meekly, meantime casting a quick glance at the bed to see how far its smoothness had been disturbed.

"And still thee continues such unbecoming and vastly indecinate behavior."

"Oh, mommy, but it is so nice!" cried the girl. "Didn't you like to sit on the floor when you were fifteen?"

"Janice, thou't more careless every day in bed-making," ejaculated Mrs. Meredith, making a sudden dive toward the bed, as if she desired to escape the question. She smoothed the gay patchwork quilt, seemed to feel something underneath, and the next moment pulled out the hidden volume. "What now, pray, as the bookseller's advertisement phrased it, is 'half calf, neat, marbled sides.'" One stern glance she gave to the two red-faced culprits, and, opening the book, read out in a voice that was in itself an impeachment, "The Adventures of Alonzo and Amaryllis!"

There was an instant's silence full of men to the culprits, and then Mrs. Meredith's wrath found vent.

"Janice Meredith!" she cried. "On a Sabbath morning, when thee should be setting thy thoughts in a fit order for church! And thou, Tabitha Drinker!"

"It's all my fault, Mrs. Meredith," hurriedly asserted Tabitha. "I brought the book with me from Trenton, and I was I suggested that we go on reading this morning."

"For hours of solemn prayer thou shalt have tomorrow," announced Mrs. Meredith to her daughter, "and this afternoon thou shalt see over the whole catechism. As for thee, Tabitha, I shall feel it my duty to write thy father of his daughter's conduct. How many times hast thou been to church?" And Mrs. Meredith started to leave the room.

"Oh, mommy," cried Janice, springing forward and flinging herself upon her mother's arm in an imploring manner, "punish me as much as you please, mommy, I was very, very wicked—but don't take the book away! He and Amaryllis were just—"

"Not another eight shall thou have of it, miss. My daughter reading love, indeed!" said Mrs. Meredith, deposited holding the evil book gingerly between her fingers, much as one might carry something that was liable to soil one's hands.

The two girls looked at each other. Tabitha with a one-legend expression, and Janice with an anxious one, which might mean many things. The flushed cheeks were perhaps due to guilt, but the tightly closed little fists were certainly due to anger, and, noting these two only, one would have safely affirmed that Janice Meredith, fiercely as she had taken her mother's scolding, had a mind and hot temper. But the eyes were fairly merry with some secret fun, certainly not anger, and though the lips were pressed tightly together, the feeling that had set them so rigidly was but a passing one, for suddenly the corners twitched, the straight line went into a curve, and falling herself upon the tall, four-posted bedstead, Miss Meredith laughed as only fifteen can laugh.

"Oh, Tibbie, Tibbie," she presently managed to articulate, "if you look like that I shall die," and as the god of Momus once more seized her, she dragged the quilt into a rumpled pile and buried her face in it, as if indeed attempting to suffocate herself.

"But, Janice, to think that we shall never know how it ended! I couldn't sleep last night for hours, because I was so afraid that Amaryllis would've have the opportunity to vindicate herself to—and "would have been listened to another day."

"And a proper punishment for naughty Tibbie Drinker it is," declared Miss Meredith, sitting up and assuming a judicially severe manner. "What do you mean, miss, by tempting good little Janice Meredith into reading a wicked romance on Sunday?"

"Good little Janice!" cried Tibbie, contemptuously. "I could slap thee, this minute. But instead she threw her arms about Janice's neck and kissed her with such rapture and ecstasy as to cause remonstrance on the part of both, and the two rolled over upon the bed laughing with anything but discretion, and collected the scattered pieces of their mentor. As a result a voice from a distance called sharply:

"Janice!"

"O gemini!" cried the owner of that name, springing off the bed and beginning to inflate her gown, an example promptly followed by her room-mate.

"Art thou dressing, child?" called the voice after a pause.

"Yes, mommy," answered Janice. Then she turned to her friend and asked: "Shall I wear my light dimity and Marian kerchief, or my purple and white striped Persian?"

"Sufficiently smart for a country ass, Jan," cried her friend.

"Don't call me a country bred, Tibbie Drinker, just because you are a city girl," said Janice.

"And why not thy blue shalloon?"

"'Tis vastly unbecoming."

"Thou'rt cheerful! Can't thee leave the men alone?"

"If will when they will!" airily laughed the girl.

"Thy wits where?" quoted Tabitha.

"Then I will when thee sets one an example," retorted Janice, making up her mind to wear the dimity and bodice revealing the straightness and suppleness of the slender figure, which was quite as much of the child as of the woman in its lines.

"Thou'rt they get from my cried Tabitha, with a tone of her head.

"Let me where is fancy bred, In the heart—or in the head ?" hummed Janice. "Of course, one doesn't think about men, Miss Tabitha, one feels." Which remark showed perception of a truth far in advance of Miss Meredith's years.

WAYS OF A HUSBAND

SEQUEL TO "WHEN A GIRL MARRIES"

By Ann Lisle

"THERE must be something we can do."

"It looks black," confessed Peter. "The Parkinson affairs are in a bad way already. The bears are after their interests. And rumor has it that the Prince Tool Co. is about bankrupt for the want of a silent partner. But that's not the biggest factor in my assault. If I could get indemnified for the loss of that confounded Ford—"

Ann Lisle

"You will, anyway. You must," I insisted.

Peter shook his head sadly.

"It doesn't matter about me," Peter managed rather grimly. "But the family name—I've disgraced that."

"You have not!" I cried. "You're going it now. But you've got a lot of fight left yet, too."

"Any nothing to fight with—or for," Peter answered in a tone that threatened tears of foolishness and desperation.

"Is there nothing that could help?" I asked.

"Only a sudden business mishap, if the stock faction had been in my side," began Peter, when Mr. Herman put out my hand and picked up the telephone. And in a voice that trembled in spite of me, I gave Mawson Ortlet's number.

"Mr. Ortlet" said a crisp secretary, "Mawson's in the south." I see office on the wire and asked for for Mawson. "He has gone south to join Mr. Hoerman and Senor and Senora Cordoba. I do not know when he will be back."

I hung up and turned to Peter Stanley.

"Mawson's in the south," explained. "They say at his office that he went to join Jim and the Cordovas. But Jim is back in the city now, and it may even be that Tom and Hamon are due shortly. I'm sorry we can't reach Mawson today. But I've an idea it won't be long before he'll be here again."

Peter smiled, pathetically trying to look like a man who hadn't just suffered a keen disappointment.

"You were a fetch to try for one," he said, and then his voice sank low. "It might be just as well that he doesn't come. It may be a painful way of saying you the humiliation of having failed—"

"It won't refuse," I said, folding my lips with determination over the words. "I'm going to make that young man see his golden opportunity in the Shipping Corporation."

MARTHA LEE'S TALK BY RADIO

By Martha Lee

Broadcast from Station WNAC for WNAC American Women's Club

WASHING PROBLEMS

"DO you soak the clothes when you use a machine?" "Is it necessary to boil them after washing?" "How long do you let the washer operate?" These are only a few of the many questions which women ask me about washing clothes the machine-way.

Or every once in a while I still find a housekeeper saying: "I don't believe in washers, I just know they won't work, and the old way is good enough for me." Or perhaps again, "If you have to wash the flannels and colored things by hand, I don't think a machine is worth buying just for the white clothes."

Before answering questions and giving plain rules for successful machine washing in every case, I will to "tackle" this viewpoint of the woman who is convinced that such and such a device or labor-saver "won't work."

Must Know How

Whenever I hear this comment so forcibly expressed, I am reminded of a friend who once bought a fireless cooker. She knew I had used a fireless successfully for many years, so she told me she was going to buy that identical make. I did not see her until several months later, when naturally I asked her how she liked the cooker she purchased. To my amazement she replied that she had returned it to the manufacturer.

"What was the matter with it?" I questioned.

"Oh, it was defective," she assured me; "I put the cereal in at night and when I took the pot out in the morning it was cold and the oatmeal still raw. No one can make me believe you can cook in that box! So I sent it right back to the manufacturer in three days."

Good Results

Now my friend thought (and probably still thinks) that she bought a defective cooker, but I know that she had not learned to use the cooker right. And so whenever I hear a woman say that a certain well-tested device "won't work," I am certain that the device will work if the woman only understands and operates it intelligently. And this applies to washing machines.

Whatever type of washing machine is selected, good washing results can be obtained, provided the machine is properly used. Be sure to have a generous proportion of water, to the linen to be washed. Every washing machine has a water line properly marked on the tub, but there is a tendency on the part of the laundress to disregard the water line or to ask the washing machine full of linen. This error is using a washing machine is so common that it is safe to state that if your clothes are not washed clean or if they tear, or if they wear unduly fast, or if they lose buttons or grass stringy, you can prevent all by washing only half the quantity at a time.

Before any washing is started there are a few tasks that must be attended to. Separate the linen that demands extra removal, and soak to it before washing. Be sure that your supplies are at hand. If hot soap is used, melt it up. If powdered, dissolve the soap more rapidly passes into solution, and here lies the secret of the magical ease with which garments are cleansed with the soap flakes on the market. In whatever form you buy be sure that the soap is dissolved before using.

See that the rubber rolls to the wringer are wiped. Oil the machine wherever it is indicated, using the oil stipulated in the directions that accompanied the machine. Wipe the linen clean and dry. Then when you finish the washing be sure to pull out the plug and coil the connecting cord where it cannot be come knotted, twisted and worn, and where also it can be protected from moisture.

How to Proceed

To wash the machine, first fill the tub of the machine with water, lukewarm in temperature and to the waterline indicated.

Second, add to this water one-half cupful of washing soda solution, made with one pound of washing soda crystals to one gallon of hot water.

Third, add one-half a quart jar of soap jelly, made by heating any neutral soap in hot water, using one jar to two quarts of water.

Fourth, turn the motor switch.

Fifth, when the motor is humming, turn on the machine clutch and run the machine for two minutes.

Sixth, turn off the machine clutch, open the tub, and if the washing solution is rich and foamy with suds, put in the clothes. If it is not sudsy enough, add more soap or soda solution. Do not forget that it must be whipped into solution before you add the clothes, if it is to yield full efficiency for cleansing. There is nothing magic in a bar of soap, but the same soap in solution is magical in its cleansing power.

Seventh, wash for fifteen minutes or longer depending upon the soil of the clothes.

Eighth, wring dry and allow to stand until you are ready to rinse all of one kind together.

Ninth, rinse in machine in as scalding hot water as you can obtain. Run the machine five minutes.

Tenth, wring dry into cold rinsing water.

Separate Clothes

Separate the clothes into their usual divisions—table, bed and body linen, colored clothes, flannels, silks and hosiery. Put the table linen into the tub of suds first, wash fifteen minutes in warm sudsy water, put through the wringer and lay aside until ready for rinsing. Do not try to rinse until you are ready to rinse in the machine. Into the same suds put the bed linen. You will probably not need to add more soap.

If you have more than four sheets with the pillow cases and towels that go with them, make two or more runs instead of trying to accomplish all at once, although the machine may be "crowded" more practically with table or bed linen than with any other type of wash, because these are apt to be but soiled. In general, wash fifteen or twenty minutes but let the amount of soil determine the time in every case.

When ready to wash the body linen, add another half jar of soapjelly or more, if necessary. There is no necessity for discarding even a very dirty washing solution. It is a surprising fact that very soiled water will wash clothes clean. That is, it will detach the dirt particles which is all that you require. Wash only a few very dirty pieces at a time, and, as stated above, for children's clothes especially be sure that plenty of soap is used.

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

The best cough medicine you ever used. A family supply easily and quickly made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for coughs, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant—children like it.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle, then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot, gives prompt, healing relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for healing the membranes. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. First of a series of advertisements regarding the telephone situation in New England

To Telephone Subscribers

An increase in telephone rates is essential because we must maintain proper standards of service for you and also must insure the investment of new money as needed to meet the increasing requirements for extensions of telephone service.

At present our rates are too low to enable us to fulfill these obligations adequately, because costs of labor and material have gone up while the purchasing power of the dollar has gone down.

The rate increases of the last ten years have brought us, on the average, less than fifteen per cent additional revenue per telephone, which leaves present rates far below the requirements of the service, and also below the rates of other parts of the country.

Consequently, within a few weeks we shall file a revised schedule of rates with the Department of Public Utilities of Massachusetts.

Our success in furnishing you satisfactory telephone service depends upon your understanding and support. Therefore, in connection with the filing of new rates we purpose to give you in subsequent public announcements, detailed reasons therefor.

We ask you to consider these reasons and to weigh carefully the facts as we present them.

KNIFES CHILD AND KILLS HIMSELF

Son of Millionaire Mellen Dons Overalls

NORWOOD MAN KNIFES CHILD, KILLS SELF

The living room in the cozy cottage of Wilfred Saloman, at No. 505 Nahatan street, Norwood, was brightly lighted and the shades were up as Mrs. Saloman returned from a concert in the centre of the town.

Before going to the door she glanced through a window and there, upon a chair near the stove, was her two-year-old son, Paul, his chest bared and a stream of blood flowing from a deep stab wound on the right side.

FOUND IN CELLAR.

The woman screamed. Neighbors came running from nearby homes and into the cottage with Mrs. Saloman. She called for husband, but there was no response. A quick search of the house was made and the lady of the house was finally discovered suspended by a cord from a water pipe in the cellar. An overturned chair was on the floor near the dangling feet of the body.

Police took the boy to the Norwood Hospital. Physicians say he will recover.

Wilfred Saloman, the father, was thirty-three years old and was a leather worker. It is said he had been drinking heavily. It is believed in some quarters he, crazed by poisonous liquor, and ignorant of his wife's absence, determined to commit suicide and conceived the idea of taking his boy with him by cutting the little fellow's heart. But he blundered at the right instead of the left side of the boy's chest.

AIDED BY NEIGHBORS.

Detectives believe he must used a safety razor blade in his attack on the boy. There is a deep wound, obviously made by several dips with a light, sharp instrument. The lad must have suffered terribly before he became unconscious.

Mrs. Saloman is being cared for by neighbors.

Soldiers Are Fed for 10 Cents a Meal in Uncle Sam's Army

Washington, Nov. 10.—It cost the United States slightly more than ten cents a meal for its soldiers during the fiscal year ended last June 30.

The daily cost of feeding soldiers, it was disclosed in the annual report of the quartermaster general, amounted to 21.65 cents for each man.

14,000 NAMES DROPPED FROM U. S. PENSION ROLL

Washington, Nov. 10.—More than 14,000 names were dropped from the government pension roll during the last year, reducing the total to 620,530. Pensions for 1924 totalled $229,994,777 or $33,017,723 less than for the previous year.

Interior Department statistics made public today showed Civil War pensioners decreased 21,856 last year and now number 146,435, while widows and dependents of veterans of that war declined from 274,444 in 1923 to 253,136 in 1924.

Spanish-American war pensioners, however, increased 16,644, to 43,000, and the number of widow and dependent pensions of this war advanced from 13,167 to 16,194.

BODY OF MISSING GIRL FOUND, DECAPITATED

Chicago, Nov. 10 (I.N.S.).—The decapitated body of a 15-year-old girl, the head lying beside the body, was found today by workmen in a scrap heap in the rear of the Union Iron Products Company, East Chicago, Indiana. The girl's tongue had been severed.

The victim, Florence Gwiazda, left home shortly after noon yesterday to visit a motion picture theatre.

Deputy Coroner Towsley announced after a post mortem examination that the girl had been attacked.

SISTER HERE, INSISTS ON CASEMENT'S INNOCENCE

New York, Nov. 10.—Mrs. Agnes Casement Newman, sister of Sir Roger Casement, who was executed for high treason by the British in 1916, arrived here on the liner Republic with what she described as irrefutable proof of her brother's innocence of the charges for which he was hanged. Mrs. Newman said she had learned that Sir Roger had declined a German offer of "untold gold" for information concerning conditions in Ireland and had been arrested charged with treason because of a misunderstanding.

NINE NEW FOREST FIRES IN NEW YORK STATE

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Light rains and snow flurries in various sections of the Adirondacks and Catskills have failed to lessen the danger of forest fires, conservation commission officials said today. The commission received reports of nine new fires, all of which have been brought under control.

STUDENT HURT IN CRASH HAS CHANCE TO RECOVER

Girls, You Can't Have High Heels and Beauty, Too

Gladys Walton's high heels, the doctors say, deform her feet and will cause lots of disagreeable things to happen to this clever Boston girl. At the left is the heel the motion picture girls should wear.

Experts Find Nervous and Stomach Disorders Due to Shoe Styles of Modern Days.

Which shall it be, girls, a beautiful face or beautiful dressed feet?

You cannot have both, according to Dr. F. T. Reiss of Boston, former head of the National Association of Chiropodists.

He not only agrees with the statement of Professor Paul Quinet, Parisian expert of anatomical research, that high heels destroy the general health, but goes him one better and declares that they produce a pained, irritable, strained expression of the countenance which is ruinous to beauty.

"A deformed foot is never beautiful," said Dr. Reiss, "but if the girls insist on cramping their feet into high heeled shoes, why, they will pay for it by acquiring an unattractive face. They certainly cannot have these so-called "beautiful" feet and a pretty face.

"Cramping of the feet into high heels finally causes a breaking down of the forward part of the foot, due to the excessive weight bearing there. It often causes an excruciating and distressing complaint called metatarsalgia, or Morton's neuralgia.

Dr. R. Kendrick Smith of the Massachusetts Osteopathy Society declares that the wearing of such heels flexes the muscles of the knees and makes a woman look as though she were about to jump. He says that is only one reason why osteopaths are opposed to them.

Others are that it throws the body out of balance, thus forcing the abdomen out and seriously injuring the general health and spine, makes her walk stiltedly and ungracefully, increases toxic poisons in the blood through impaired digestion and faulty elimination of food, and because it injures her mentally as well as physically. It also seriously hampers maternity, states Dr. Smith, by the displacement of the pelvic organs.

"It is not so bad for society women to wear high heels at afternoon or evening functions, because they wear low-heeled or sport shoes for walking, and rest in their automobiles. The working girl who can only afford one pair of fancy shoes and uses them all day and at a dance at night is the real sufferer," stated another shoe expert.

"That pedestrians do not size up high-heeled shoes as belonging to girls who are highbrows, however, may be gathered from a remark of a recent visitor from the West, who said he could judge the social standing of a Boston woman by her heels: "The lower the heels, the higher the highbrow," he observed.

WHITES DRIVE OUT 500 NEGROES IN RACE FEUD

Harrisburg, Ky., Nov. 10.—Armed white workmen drove out approximately 500 negroes from the construction camp of the Dix River dam, eight miles from here, after dam construction camp today.

Emma Goldman to Try to Re-Enter United States

London, Nov. 10.—Emma Goldman, the veteran Radical leader, who was deported from the United States as an undesirable alien in 1919, has been staying in London for the last few weeks, but has declined to tell anything about her visit except that she intends to rest and write her autobiography.

The Daily Sketch quotes her as saying that she is still very fond of the United States, and intends in some manner to return there.

Edward Winkle, eighteen, a bridegroom of a few days, had been fatally shot by negro highwaymen. Winkle was shot to death by a negro named "Jelly Roll." Fifty national guardsmen arrived at the Dix River dam, eight miles from here, after dam construction camp today.

JUGGLES PACKING CASES

Starts Work With Son of Banker in Department Store

Raymond Mellen, son of Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad and worth at least $1,000,000, today donned a pair of overalls and juggled packing cases in a department store as his first step up the ladder of life.

By the side of Raymond Mellen labored Charles S. Sabin, Jr., his chum and son of the international banker of New York City. Both, long ago, had resolved to begin their careers at the very bottom of the ladder in emulation of their fathers.

They jobs are in Filene department store of W. M. Whitney at Albany, N. Y. The store was founded by young Sabin's maternal grandfathers.

WANT NO SNAPS.

"We don't know how hard they'll work us," the young men, who became friends at Williams College said today, "but whatever it is, we'll do it hard."

The failure of the boys began their own careers humbly, but each in a business that suits him for life and became famous in. Charles H. Sabin started as a stock boy in the National Commercial Bank in this city. Charles Sumner Mellen, of Stockbridge, Mass., began as a switchboy rail road executive thirty years ago.

The parents of both boys have indorsed the idea of their starting in at the bottom of the ladder, they boys said. Indeed, they hinted, the thought of such a course may have been planted in their minds by the two fathers.

IN LODGING HOUSE.

The boys have engaged single rooms on the second floor of an modest lodging house, an establishment patronized chiefly by capital employes, especially during legislative sessions.

"We haven't any idea how much our salaries will be," Sabin said, "but whatever it is we intend to try to live within it."

"You know, young Mellen added, "since this is our first attempt at business we can't very well pick out any kind of a job in the store."

They arrived in Albany Saturday night and passed most Sunday trying to find a reasonably-priced boarding house with good food."

TERRIFIC DEFEAT WILL PULL HARVARD TOGETHER FOR YALE

TIGERS IN HALL OF FAME

BY NICK FLATLEY

HARVARD is starting a wild drive to emerge from stadium football gloom. Boston College is back among the great teams and Yale is touched to death about the Princeton game Saturday. After the Stadium catastrophe, Yale should worry. The Tigers were the most stinking surprise of a start-ling Saturday of upsets. The next weekend is likely to have as many more. Football is more uncertain than horse racing, do far as the dope goes, and the boys who try to pick 'em can tell you how tough that is.

* * *

THE Tigers, who looked like Notre Dame dolled up for a masquerade, will rattle into history on the strength of their one performance. They played a super-perfect game of football, and nobody could have licked them. As American experts could name the Princeton victory of November 8 in toto, and never be accused of going wrong. They haven't anything the matter with Harvard, except that Princeton was present. Stopping the Bengals would have taken an embalmed regiment with machine-gun frontage. And even then some of those husky backs would have squirmed between the buffalo. The pastime was a fearful thing at the modern theory that great weight is an essential to make our football. A lot of huge ex-prep schoolers was strong enough to send a 200-pound fullback crashing against the Boner end. But the end of fighting had a few pitchforkends on those dashing devils.

* * *

IT'S an ill wind that blows nobody good. That gale was sort of a gale for Harvard. It proved that the team hasn't natural fire nor im-petus in its natural make-up. Shocked quickly from shock, that its natural power doesn't mean a thing when a human whirlwind blows down. Two drive fighter who get one behind on the chin at the opening bell, may stagger through a long battle and not know what it's all about. He can come back. It can a football team. But one very seldom does. That's the only twice since it Harvard's days in the Old Pal Field. Only twice in less than two weeks away, there's not much room in Cambridge.

* * *

BILL ROPER has hustled himself back on the coaching platform with K. Rockne and the other greats. Roper should win. Will let his athletes lose. Notre Dame two years running. They have the answer too. Roper didn't quit. One thing he found that perfect co-ordination and timing on every play produce unbeatable football. He lit-erally wiped out a weakness that ailed all Fall. He didn't have any stars, but he got the best he had. And they surely carried on for William.

* * *

THE huddle system will now come in for a lot of discus-sion. There has been a big drive against it in the East, but the op-ponents haven't more than a few fractured grass blades left to stand on. Princeton reeled off plays with

Lenglen Begins Training To Recover Tennis Honors

Nice, France, Nov. 10 (A.P.).—Suzanne Lenglen, completely re-covered from the illness which caused her to withdraw from the Wimbledon tennis tournament and remain away from the Olympic competition, has started in light training on the courts of the Nice Tennis Club, of which her father is manager, with a view to resum-ing in the tennis world the position which she oc-cupied in 1923.

Mlle. Lenglen

Whether she is successful or not, it is her present intention to retire at the end of 1926. But "women vary," said old King Francis the First of France, and among her friends and acquaintances Suzanne's emphatic expression of her determination to abandon tennis is received with some pessimism.

Suzanne is about 15 pounds over her best play-ing weight and she intends to take things easy, gradually rounding into form during the Riviera tournament, playing doubles and mixed doubles. She may not play singles until the Spring tourna-ment of the Nice Tennis Club next March.

Meanwhile, Mlle. Emillenne Viada, French 1924 champion, finalist against Miss Helen Wills in the Olympic games and Suzanne's most dangerous op-ponent in France, recently was married and probably will play no more tennis.

STASIAK BALKS AT MAT BOUT WITH BINKLEY

Stanley Stasiak, the Lion of Po-land is greatly peeved that Cliff Binkley has been matched to meet Frank Bruno, the Ukrainian heavy-weight, at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night.

Paul Bowser and Stasiak had a misunderstanding over this match. It seems that Bowser first offered Stasiak the date to meet Binkley at the Grand, but Stasiak refused and asked to be matched with some lesser light.

This Bowser refused to do.

It is likely that Bowser will in-sist that Stasiak meet Binkley in a finish match before he works any more shows for him in Boston.

Binkley will have a lot of trouble on his hands as Bruno is one of the toughest of the crop of young wrestlers to compete here in late years.

He is almost as large as Binkley or Stasiak and wants matches with any of the leading heavies of the day. Should he win from Binkley on Thursday he will be in a position to force a return match with Stasiak.

Mike Dimmas of Boston is looking around for a suitable man to wrestle Sergeant Joe Malacewicz in the semi-final.

In the opening bout Nick Bozinos will meet Bill Rudy in a one-fall match.

Boxing Is "Brutal and Savage," Says French Mayor

Paris, Nov. 10.—A Mayor's right to forbid a boxing exhibi-tion was upheld today by the State Council, which is the final authority on all adminis-trative acts. The appeal was by a sporting club, against the Mayor of Chalons-sur-Marne, who prohibited a series of bouts arranged by the club two years ago. In his ordinance the Mayor declared that boxing was "brutal and sometimes sav-age," that it might result in serious injury, and that it vio-lated the principles of "moral hygiene."

The sporting club was sen-tenced to pay four francs—the expense incurred by the Mayor for documentary stamps.

Wanderers Cop

Boston Wanderers defeated Dor-chester Midgets, 9 to 0, at Dor-chester Town Field. Leo Hughes scored a touchdown and dropped a goal from the field for all Boston's points.

Pere Marquette Wins

Pere Marquette took the scalp of one more opponent, the Newport A. C. eleven of Rhode Island, 20 to 0 at the C. J. Lee Playgrounds, South Boston.

"Bo" McMillan's Teammate Hopes To Wear Jack Dempsey's Crown

When "Bo" McMillan and his fel-low "Praying Colonels" of College's famous football team, were making gridiron fame eternal for themselves, one of the strongest players on the eleven was Sully Montgomery.

For four years the mighty tackle for the little Kentucky college played desperate football, and it was many a hole he tore through opponents' lines for McMillan and Covington to make their impressive gains.

During his vacation in his junior year, Sully Montgomery went back home to Fort Worth, Texas, where his father is chief of police.

There he met Captain Bob Roper, former heavyweight champion of the A. E. F., who was so struck with the tremendous strength of the foot-ball star that he asked him to look him up after he graduated from col-lege.

Montgomery found Roper in Chi-cago, and the big fellow taught the football star the rudiments of the boxing game.

Then he turned him over to Eddie McGorty, who put more points onto him and let him fight a few push-overs.

He started off with a victory over Eddie Collins. Montgomery decided he wasn't hitting accurately enough to fight, so when they fought again, he learned to hit accurately and Collins was knocked out in three rounds.

Then followed more preliminaries, and Montgomery got unduly elated. So McGorty matched him with Jack McCarthy, who knocked him out. A little later Jim Flynn did the same thing.

That taught Montgomery his les-son. He learned to keep his chin guarded. Since then he hasn't been defeated.

SHEVLIN AND LOWERY IN ONLY PRO BOUT OF WEEK

By JACK CONWAY

EDDIE SHEVLIN, New England welterweight champion, and Bob Lowery, Scotch title-holder, will mingle in the only professional bout of the week in this city. These worthies are booked to clash at the Com-mercial A. C. show at Mechanics Building on Friday night.

This will be the toughest assignment which Shevlin has had for some time. The Roxbury favorite will have to step in old-time form if he is to dispose of the rushing, two-handed Scotch champion.

In his last start, Lowery handed the dope quite an upset when he knocked out Scoops White of Worcester, one of the most promis-ing of our New England boxers. Lowery is a sturdy infighter. This method of warfare is what caused the downfall of White. It will also worry Shevlin.

The Scotchman is also difficult to hit as he holds his guard high and keeps a good forward most of the time he is in the ring.

THERE will be an amateur box-ing show at the B. A. A. on Wednesday night. Tom Kanaly in-forms us he has received an attrac-tive list of entries. There will be five classes, namely 118 and 122 pounds, novice, and 126, 135 and 147 pounds, open.

The B. A. A. has always been a leader in fostering clean, wholesome boxing among the simon purees. It was a the B. A. A. that Jimmy Wilde, one of the world's leading bantamweights twelve years ago got his start as a boxer.

Mike Reidy of South Boston, now one of Mayor Curley's aides, also boxed at the B. A. A. in the old days. On one occasion Mike had the famous George Dixon as an oppo-nent. Ask Mike to tell you about this sensational colored feather-weight, who won the world's title in his class.

* * *

FIFTEEN years ago our amateur clubs turned out boxers who made good in the ranks of profes-sionals. There is the case of Sam Langford, one of the greatest fight-ers the world has known. Sam used to sweep up at a club conducted by Eddie Keavin and Joe Woodman. One night there was an amateur show. A few added starters were needed. So Sam surrendered his broom and donned a boxing outfit. He then paraded in and proved a riot, knocking out his opponents with ease.

* * *

COULD Langford at his best have defeated Dempsey at his best? This question has been asked thousands of times. Anyhow it would have been a sensational battle, probably one of the greatest slug-fests in the history of the ring.

BILLIARD STARS SIGN FOR BIG CONTEST

New York, Nov. 10.—Kamataro Suzuki, regarded as the best of the Japanese balkline billiard players in this country, was matched with Erich Hagenlacher, the German champion. They will meet Novem-ber 20 and 21, at the Fourteenth Street Academy, in a 1,200 point match, to be played afternoon and evening in blocks of 300.

Hagenlacher and the Japanese have met twice before at the 18.2 game, and have divided the honors. In the first match Suzuki was vic-torious, but a few weeks later Hagen-lacher turned the tables on him by an overwhelming score, and since then the Japanese has been out to get revenge. Both men have been turning in runs of better than 200 during the last fortnight.

In the Manhattan straight rail championship at the Fourteenth Street Academy, Jack Savage made the high run record of 42. Phil Maise stands next with 33. The tourna-ment is being played for a diamond pin, gold watch and other prizes. The standings up to last night were as follows:

FITTONS LOSE FIRST GAME TO SAINTS

The St. Alphonsus A. A. eleven de-feated the Fitton A. A. team, 6 to 0, at the Penn Playground. Early in the second period Fitton handed Costa the ball on a fumble and Con-nell went over for the only score of the game, Cohen's attempt to place kick an extra point being blocked.

MICHIGAN GRIDDERS TO TAKE UP MAT SPORT

Ann Arbor, Nov. 10.—Seven var-sity football men will report to Coach Barker for wrestling workouts after the football season ends November 22. Michigan has signed five meets with Conference wrestling teams and has an unusually large number of aspirants for varsity teams.

Bobby Garcia Matched

Cleveland, Nov. 10.—Eddie Ander-son, of Chicago, has been matched to box Bobby Garcia, of Baltimore, twelve rounds to a decision here November 14.

'Windy City' Wants Army-Navy Game Next Season

Washington, Nov. 10.—Rep-resentative Fred Britten, Re-publican, of Illinois, today con-ferred with Major-General Daniel Nolan, deputy chief of staff of the army, over plans to stage the Army-Navy foot-ball game in Chicago in 1925.

Britten said the chief of staff-ing the student bodies of the two academies in Chicago would amount to several hun-dred thousand dollars, but that the city was prepared to defray this expense.

Arguing that the Army had the privilege of selecting the site for the 1925 game, Britten told General Nolan that the effect of playing it in the Mid-die West would be most bene-ficial to the morale of the army.

BOXERS IN TREK TO PACIFIC COAST

By FRED KEATS

Promoters in California, where a measure permitting 10 and 12-round bouts was passed recently, are al-ready bestirring themselves.

Have started a rush to obtain clubs and be the first to take ad-vantage of the new law.

Several of the new ring magnates are so loaded with enthusiasm they have made flattering offers for matches to leading pugs located here in the East.

Jack Dempsey, Mickey Walker and Benny Leonard already have re-ceived wire bids for their services.

BIDS FOR DEMPSEY.

Offer to Dempsey comes from Fred Winsor, manager of Tony Fuente, a Mexican heavyweight. Winsor offers to pay the champ plenty to step off at Culver City and toy with the Mex.

* * *

May be just a clever dodge to ob-tain some publicity for Winsor's protege.

In any case, it is the forerunner of many genuine offers that Coast promoters are preparing.

Friends of Jim Coffroth, who man-ages the racetrack at Tia Juana, have offered to back him in the pro-motion of a match in which Demp-sey will be one of the principals.

Sunny Jim lost interest in the ring when twenty-round fights went out of fashion on the coast, but he is always willing to consider any propo-sition that sounds promising.

MONTIETH WIDE AWAKE.

The first contingent of Eastern boxers to proceed to California will start early next month. Scotty Mon-tieth will ride here on this bunch.

Also out for Will Lake are Kid Kaplan, Vic Brog, Jimmy Hutchin-son, Charley Nashert and Juan Bieza.

Two men have been signed for three bouts apiece at Jack Doyle's arena at Vernon. Kaplan is one of the leading contenders for the vacant featherweight title.

Doyle has already started work on a new arena with a seating ca-pacity of more than 10,000. He ex-pects to be ready to stage his first bout within a month.

Two Youthful Bike Stars Will Start at Madison Square

New York, Nov. 10.—The Chicago six-day bicycle race made two new young six-day stars and both of them will compete in the New York grind in Madison Square Garden. The riders to make good were Louis Benezatto, popular young member of the Unione Sportiva Italiana, the biggest bicycle club in the city of New York, and Norman Hill, speedy youngster from San Jose, Cal. Hill has been a consistent point winner in a Garden grind. He is only 18 years old and will not be 19 until next April. Benezatto is only 28 years old.

Hill and Benezatto surprised every-one by their good riding in the Windy City, the former finishing a battling in the sprints and in the "jams." When John Chapman starts pairing the riders he will give both of these boys a good mate.

Loosen Up That Cold With Musterole

Have Musterole handy when a cold starts. Rub part of the con-tents of grandmother's mustard plaster WITHOUT the blister. You just apply it with the fingers. First you feel a warm tingle as the heal-ing ointment penetrates the pores, then comes a soothing, cooling sen-sation and quick relief.

Made of pure oil of mustard and other simple ingredients, Musterole is recommended by many nurses and doctors. Try Musterole for bronchitis, sore throat, stiff neck, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, croup, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back or joints, sores, scratches, sprains, bruis-es, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest (it may prevent pneu-monia and "flu."

To Mothers: Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

M'EWAN PICKS YALE TO BEAT "BIG THREE" RIVALS

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 10.—In the opinion of Head Coach J. J. McEwan, of the Army team, and his players, Yale should have little difficulty in defeating Princeton and Harvard. McEwan, speaking of the Yale-Army game, is quoted as saying:

3 MINUTE JOURNEYS

By Temple Manning

DID you ever take the penny steamers to Kew or Richmond?

If not you haven't thoroughly done London.

The River Thames winds its sinuous way through the great, spreading city. It is navigated by small, narrow passenger steamers, whose funnels are arranged to fold neatly when passing under the numerous bridges that span the stream, thus avoiding delays at the draws.

They are no longer pretty steamers, doing prices make a round trip in Richmond a couple of shillings, but even this is unobjectionable for five delightful hours on the water.

The Thames at Lambeth Bridge is navigable for ocean steamers. It is wide, deep and dirty. On the right going to the river are moored numerous barges, the Tower of London, the Embankment, with its background of the Strand, the Law Courts and Fleet Street, Parliament House and the Abbey. For half an hour after the steamer passes through a section of the river devoted to factories and huge grain warehouses. Gradually the commercial structures fade out and miles of green appear. Then come beautiful residences with gardens running down to the water and were now and then an imposing mansion or even a big park like the castle of the Duke of Northumberland.

Pretty river villages are passed, with ancient inns facing the water. Boats are built here and there. Their possibilities are to be looked by the eyes of the river.

Tomorrow, "Old Newspaper Features in Use."

Teacher: "Billy, how many miles is it from Fall River to New Bedford?"

Billy: "I don't know."

Teacher: "Well, Billy, it is just a distance of fourteen miles. If you go to see a specialist, how do you have to stretch a point. You can make your appointment with him one week or one year from Now Year to Christmas.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Dr. Mahoney

Dr. F. X. Mahoney
Boston Health Commissioner

THE dreams that come true are, chiefly, our day dreams.

Our day dreams are sometimes called "phantasies."

By this is meant that we imagine something with a vividness somewhat as if we had seen or heard of what we were speculating about.

It means, also, that we dwell sometimes intensively and for long upon the picture, the always pleasing picture, that we thus spread us on the canvas of our fancy.

And that's the way the dreams come true. That's the way we sometimes get a luxurious home, castles in Spain, where Don Quixote lived and dreamed into real substantial American homes.

And this is the process.

You dream and, within normal limits, you become intensively fond of her. You spread the colors upon the canvas, the more vivid the better. You adjust the prospect you have created, the more lovely the better.

Is it a lover, a sweetheart, a home, babies, art, music, literature, religion, or travel? It makes no difference. Build about each central idea, all the accessories of beauty, comfort, grace and goodness that appeal to the very best there is in you.

In this way your day dreams become transformed into your ideal.

Then you say that you forget it.

But do you?

Once in a while when you consciously think about doing something, this ideal will pop up its head and say "Don't."

Then you turn with do a little directive thinking, and, if your mere impulses are not too strong, you will answer "I won't—and you don't.

You ideals are the determiners of your destiny.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

I have catarrh of the nose and throat. Can you suggest a home treatment?

ANSWER.

The chronic condition from which you are suffering is very apt to make a person feel depressed. My advice to you is to see a specialist, even if you have to stretch a point. You can make your appointment with him one week or one year from Now Year to Christmas.

R. C. F.
Milton.

The condition of which you speak is probably due to a slight inflammation of the orifice of the eustachian tube that is the tube from the ear to the throat. With the disappearance of the throat symptoms, the ear condition should clear up.

When I wake, I have a lot of pimples. What do you suggest for them?

ANSWER.

You should have your meals regularly. You are probably in search of something, either sports, or otherwise, to relieve your nervous tension. The cultivation of this characteristic will remove the condition of which you complain.

PARTIES WILL ADD TO XMAS BASKET FUND

An entertainment and dance in aid of the needy Hand Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston American has been planned by Miss Helena Pesaglia of Somerville.

This party will be conducted on Wednesday evening, December 17, in Robb's Auditorium, Davis Square, Somerville. Free use of this fine auditorium has been contributed by J. W. F. Hobbs of Somerville Theatre. The Penn Orchestra, of which "Johnny" Bruno is leader, will play for the occasion, all members of it having donated their services.

BABY ALSO AIDS.

Miss Pesaglia has been one of the most active workers for the Christmas Basket Fund for many years. She has added the Fund in many ways, including making collections, conducting entertainments, appearing into appeals for assistance and in the distribution of food.

Mr. and Mrs. Pesaglia believe the American's Christmas Fund to be one of the best mediums in Greater Boston for helping the needy, and they are bringing up their young daughter, Marie, to think so, too.

Baby Marie was the season's first contributor to the Fund, sending in a dollar that she had been saving for that purpose. She is also saving pennies and dimes in a bank, and daddy made the promise from an old shell while fighting for this country during the World War.

Mr. and Mrs. Pesaglia hope to make the Somerville party in aid of the Fund one of the most successful of the many that are to be held in order that thousands of hungry kiddies may enjoy a substantial dinner on Christmas Day.

MATTAPAN PARTY.

Mattapan folks are planning to do their part to boost the American's Fund through the medium of a dance party on Saturday evening, December 6. This party will be conducted in Oberta's Ringside, River street, near Mattapan square, under the auspices of the Jewell Sisters.

The numerous friends of these talented girls are planning to aid them in making the bungalow party a success. Free use of the bungalow has been offered by Mr. Oberta, who has always been a good friend of the American's Fund.

Contributions to the Fund follow:

Balance from 1923	$288.99
Interest at 5 per cent	29.74
"Baby" Marie Pesaglia	1.00
M. M. L.	5.00

Valentino, Beard and All, Arrives on Leviathan

New York, Nov. 10.—A small army of the fair sex was expected to meet the Leviathan at her dock today when the big liner arrives with Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Valentino, Mrs. Nazimi and Jack Coogan. Wireless reports from the liner that "Rudy" was using a beard was not expected to dampen the ardor of his admirers.

RICH SOCIETY DEBUTANTE ELOPES

New York, Nov. 10.—The engagement of Miss Delestnar Elizabeth Palmer, eighteen years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Palmer of Malva, Ia., and Chicago, and Julian K. Sprague, twenty-one, son of Frank Julian Sprague, engineer and inventor, and Mrs. Sprague of New York, and Sharon, Conn., became known here today.

Miss Palmer and Sprague, who had known each other since their early school days, were married by a Presbyterian clergyman at Brewster, N. Y.

Frank Sprague, among whose achievements are the development of automatic railroad signals and brake controls and the inauguration of high-speed house elevators, declined comment, but later issued a formal announcement of the young couple's marriage.

ROMANCE OF GRID STAR IS BALKED

No Wedding Bells

LILLA M. BERRY

The toughest line the semi-professional football players of the Newton Lion Tamers' Club ever bucked was easy compared to the line of obstacles placed between one of their number and the goal of matrimony.

Eugene O. MacQueen, eighteen years old, of No. 419 Auburn street, Auburndale, is the football player who seeks to take the "love, honor and obey" vows. Between him and that goal three stands his determined mother and State laws forbidding the marriage of minors without parental consent.

"DON'T LIKE THE GIRL."

"Ma" MacQueen refuses to budge from her position. And there is little chance to alter the laws.

Another handicap under which the love-stricken football player suffers is a strained shoulder, which keeps him in his bed while he is eager to be up and furthering his wedding plans. Pretty tough for even a toughened Lion Tamer.

"Eugene is too young to be married; he is not working, and besides, I don't like the girl," says Mrs. MacQueen in explaining why she is furnishing such dogged interference as her son tries to dash over the line that leads to wedded happiness. To illustrate her attitude toward the girl who has consented to become her daughter-in-law Mrs. MacQueen said, "You may have that picture when you are through with it" as she handed a photograph of the girl to a reporter.

The girl for whom there is to welcome written on the MacQueen doormat is Miss Lilla M. Berry, eighteen years old, of No. 63 West Central street, Natick. She met MacQueen when they were employed in adjoining stores in Waltham. With him she went to the Newton City Hall on Thursday and filed marriage intentions.

"Why don't you go to your father and ask him to sign the marriage intention papers for you?" young MacQueen was asked.

"I don't dare to," was his reply.

TO MARRY IN SPRING.

Despite the opposition of MacQueen's mother, Miss Barry declares she will marry him just the same.

"I love him and he loves me," she says. "Neither our youth nor the objection of his family will stand between us.

"We will be married in the Spring, despite all obstacles. We hadn't intended to be married any sooner. Eugene thought that he would file his intentions in advance, that is all.

Eugene came to see me last Saturday night, and told me that everything would go smoothly. He never said anything about the license being refused.

"I never knew that his mother had any objection to me. But if she has, I don't see what difference that should make to us.

"It is our love that counts, not what his family thinks about me. He is not the kind to let anyone dictate to him like this."

PASADENA GIRL WINS HUB GUILD PLAY PRIZE

Frank Chouteau Brown, Robert Emmons Rogers, Frank W. C. Hersey and Jack Randall Crawford, judges in the prize play competition held for the first time by the Theatre Guild of Boston, awarded the prize, $100, a production and option, to "Her Daughter's Mother," by Margaret Penney, Pasadena, Calif.

Honorable mention was given the following plays, recommended for production: "Pog," by I. Irby Koon, Greenville, S. C.; "The Shade Man," by Katherine Reef, New York; "Mora," by Arthur Corning White, Hanover, N. H.; "Kid," by Mrs. Elmer H. Levinger, Wilmington, Del.; "The Defiance to the Moon," by Myra and Seamnon Lockwood, Flushing, N. Y.; "The Chairman of the Board," by William Hurd Hillyer, New York, N. Y.; "The Undercurrent," by Philip H. McCaigne, Marblehead; "The White, White Lie," by Mary R. P. Hatch, Brookline, and "Alabaster," by Benjamin W. Newman, San Francisco, Calif.

NEW TEST FOR 'MARJORIE' IS URGED

Mrs. Lucy Hamilton Crandon, wife of Dr. Le Roi G. Crandon of No. 11mo street, Boston, is defended as a spiritualistic medium by Dr. Howard Carrington, of the American Society of Psychical Research.

Although Harry Houdini, noted magician, has branded Mrs. Crandon as an impostor in her psychic manifestations, Dr. Carrington, in an address at the Church of All Nations, New York, urges that the Boston woman be given more opportunities to demonstrate her apparent connection with the psychic world.

TELLS OF TEST.

Dr. Carrington outlined the tests made in Boston of the medium "Marjorie," who is Mrs. L. R. G. Crandall, the wife of a prosperous physician, by a committee named by the Scientific American of which he was a member.

"It did not seem to us there could be any motive for fraud," Dr. Carrington said. "The expenses of the investigators were paid and every facility was provided. Mrs. Crandall sat in a three-sided cabinet and members of the committee held both of her hands and her feet.

"A table was lifted, there were raps, a light appeared, varying in size from a pin head to a saucer; electric lights were turned on and off when our hands were over the switch and an automatic phonograph stopped when no one was near it. We could not explain this.

NO EXPLANATION.

"Once a wing of the cabinet, held by steel braces and screws, was torn away when members of the committee held Mrs. Crandall so she could not move. There is no explanation for the ringing of an electric bell without the completion of the circuit.

"We held from ten to forty sittings with her. Harry Houdini thought her fraudulent, but I do not think he was entirely fair to pronounce judgment after a few sittings, although I believe him a clever and sincere man.

"He brought with him a box with holes in it for Mrs. Crandall's head and arms. Otherwise it enveloped her body and she was locked in. Under these conditions nothing occurred.

"Let us assume that the manifestations came from something—nervous energy—which emanated from the body of the medium.

SALLIES' HEAD TELLS ARMY'S HISTORY

A slight, gray clad wisp of a woman, held an audience at the Boston Opera House spellbound for two hours as she told the story of "The World's Greatest Romance."

She was Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army and daughter of the founder of that organization.

The message of Evangeline Booth was one of peace. With the tactics of Billy Sunday, she paced the platform and aroused her audience to enthusiasm as she warned against militarism and urged that Armistice Day be made a religious observation rather than a militaristic celebration.

SPIRITUAL LESSONS.

"I am afraid, among some people, there is a tendency to make the celebration of Armistice Day merely an annually recurring jubilee to remembrance of a great military victory," she declared. "The victory was indeed indescribably glorious. There is no doubt of that.

"But if we remember only the triumph in the field, we fail utterly to impress ourselves with the great moral and spiritual lessons to be derived from that triumph and from the events preceding and following it.

"By subordinatin the fact of victory in the field we do not in any way underestimate the courage and heroism of our soldiers. Rather do we perpetuate their memory in a far more commendable an lasting manner.

PRAISES BABE VOLSTEAD ACT.

"Therefore, let me say that we should desecrate rather than celebrate Armistice Day if we should allow ourselves to rattle the sabres or indulge in the great and glorious boasting over the military victory. Armistice Day is a time to look to God. It is a time to rededicate our hearts to the cause of peace and to the spiritual progress of humanity."

Commander Booth traced the history of the Salvation Army from its humble beginning, within a circle around a London lamp-post, to the present, when in this nation alone it is reaching more than 30,000,000 persons with its message.

Joy over the popular approval of the State prohibition amendment in the recent election, was expressed by Commander Booth. She stated the fact the referendum was defeated in 1922, but passed in 1924. In a great industrial State, indicated clearly enough the tendency of the people toward complete enforcement of the law.

FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

If Wall Street at present be living up to its reputation of forecasting business developments, something in the way of a boom will be in order early in the coming year.

* * *

Readers of this column certainly will not be taken by surprise should notable prosperity set in. Solid foundations have been laid during recent months, and now has come an election result unexpectedly gratifying to most financial and business people. If the conditions now existing in the United States, together with recent events in Europe, do not furnish the basis for distinctly greater business activity, then all yardsticks will have lost their power to measure.

* * *

What is happening?

The impressive voting towards conservatism on November 4, resulting in giving the Coolidge administration a working majority in both Senate and House, is interpreted as insuring at least two years, and perhaps four years, of political peace and business. All fears of fantastic and ruinously costly "relief" for our farmers and all fears of anti-railroad legislation have vanished. At the same time additional tax reductions are believed assured, for both business concerns and individuals. Rigid governmental economy is counted upon. Business, in fact, expects President Coolidge to give the country "normalcy" plus.

* * *

Consequently, it is entirely natural that the securities markets should indulge in a spectacular celebration, led by railroad issues. Wall Street flies to extremes. Dealings during the second half of last week have rarely been matched in volume and bullishness. Friday was the biggest day the stock market has experienced in five years. More than 800 stocks were traded in, to the tune of more than two-and-a-third million shares. The advance scored by the rails, quite two points, has been equalled during one session of the New York Stock Exchange, and industrials improved almost a point.

* * *

Simultaneously, all grain prices rose very sharply. December wheat crossed $1.50 and May wheat $1.52 in Chicago, reaching almost the peak quotations for the season. Corn, oats, and rye also advanced.

Cotton operators waited for Saturday's official crop report. When it showed only a little over 12,500,000 bales, the market turned upward, 50 per cent. greater than in September, 1923.

The railroads continue to announce record-breaking traffic. The question suggested recently in this column is now coming to be asked by hand-to-mouth buyers: "What may happen if the confidence in the general outlook has been greatly stimulated?"

The shows of winter soon will overtake the calendar over a large part of the country. Severe frosts and snowstorms and blizzards bring with railway operations. If heavy orders and a heavy winter come along together, how will retailers, jobbers, manufacturers and others who have kept down stocks of raw material and finished goods to a subnormal basis do for?

The prospect is that ordering of goods will be quickened forthwith.

Is this a time to become a bear on the United States?

TRADE STEAMS AHEAD AFTER ELECTION

Coolidge Victory Releases Many Orders Contingent Upon His Success

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Along came the Presidential election with its generally expected outcome.

The minds of leaders in fields of business and finance were set at ease.

Uncertainty cars were shunted on to the sidetrack, while the good old train of Prosperity started steaming ahead.

Just now the going is a bit upgrade.

But the Coolidge victory has sanded the tracks.

In a word, retail and wholesale trade as well as manufacturing in New England have during the past week revived their tendency to expand.

With the Thanksgiving-Christmas holiday season at hand to lend stimulus to the betterment movement, there can be little doubt of the growing grounds for optimism.

* * *

In the textile centres, more mills have started to work longer hours.

* * *

Improvement in the New England shoe-making trade continues, though the larger establishments are expected in some instances to show lower profits for the year as a whole than in 1923, handicapped as they have been by large "overhead."

The jewelry manufacturing business, by the way, has in the past been considered as centering in Providence and the Attleboros. The writer hears that Somerville has a claim to a definite "place in the sun" as a rival of the cities just named.

* * *

New England construction has again set record breaking figures. For the last reported week new construction in the Northeastern States was about 37% greater than the like week a year ago. For the month of September as a whole new building in New England was 50 per cent. greater than in September, 1923.

Our forecast at the outset of the present year that there would not be a whole see a slump in new construction is perhaps worth repeating here.

* * *

The strength that has been prevailing for several weeks in the raw materials markets continues to follow precedent and now itself in quotations for finished goods. This is especially the case today, when retail dealers' stocks are known to be low.

* * *

I hear American Woolen officials think at least 50 per cent. orders for fall goods would have been received by a Democratic victory at the November polls. So this result of the election of President Coolidge has "solidified" just that many orders. They are personally not overspoken with optimism regarding the future.

Boston Financial News, long at No. 169 State street, is leaving its present quarters, the publishers tell me, shortly.

"Arrangements have now been completed for the removal of the Boston Financial News building to additional offices in Babson Park, Wellesley. The first edition to be printed in the new location will appear Monday, November 17.

"In this community, which is destined to become the statistical centre of America, we shall have access to the vast resources of the Babson Statistical Organization, the Babson Institute, Roger Babson's home, the Publishers' Financial Bureau, and other statistical and financial organizations."

BAY STATE IS CO-OPERATIVE LEADER

We have more co-operative marketing activities of every kind in this State than in any other State of the Union."

That was the text of Dr. A. W. Gilbert of Dedham, State Commissioner of Agriculture, to a query as to whether co-operative marketing had a good future in New England.

To him when the interests are now booming him for the governorship elected by friends and acquaintances are now booming him for the governorship made vacant by the death of the late Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, lost no time in pursuing the answer. "We got co-operative farmers are buying together and selling together in increasing amounts every year," declared the doctor, who was born on a farm in West Brookfield.

Arthur W. Gilbert

REAL FARMER HERE

"The Eastern States Farmers' Exchange is a good example. Its operation during $4,000,000 worth of business as a result. Here in Massachusetts and New England we have got co-operative milk plants in cities like Brockton, Worcester, Springfield, Boston and Pittsfield.

"Incidentally at a meeting in Cleveland recently I was elected president of the International Institute of Co-operation, which is made up of co-operatives all over the country, so we know what we're talking about.

* * *

Dr. Gilbert was asked if he didn't consider the Commissioner should be a real farmer, while the so-called wheat farmer of the Middle West ought to be called a wholesale gardener, or one crop specialist. The Commissioner replied this is unquestionably so, and said it was a timely question.

"The Eastern farmer and I want the bear down on this point." The doctor said, "is that the Massachusetts farmer is not only a producer of seeds but he also is a very heavy buyer. And the prosperity of the farmers puts them at a buying power that makes for improved business conditions immediately.

"The business of farming in Massachusetts is on a sound basis now. There is $300,000,000 invested in farms of Massachusetts, and the annual output of farm products amounts to the enormous sum of $53,000,000 a year.

LIVING COST HIGHER.

"The New England farmer has a very definite bearing on the food supply of New England. At the present time the cost of living in Massachusetts is considerably higher than it is in Western and Southern cities, which are a competing mart. The cost is about 75% a family higher here. With the help of the co-operative plan, I believe, this would be possible to grow four or five times as much food in Massachusetts as is now being grown. This would guarantee a steady food supply at a lower cost for the people in our industrial centres.

"I would like to make mention of the fact that the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture publishes a bulletin each week giving retail prices of food. Everybody should subscribe for this, as it is sent for cost of postage only.

"Getting back to farms again, the New England farms are more diversified than Western farms."

All of which is as plain as the nose on your face that Dr. Gilbert has faith in the New England farmer.

Henry Cabot Lodge

A great Bostonian, a great son of Massachusetts, but greatest as an American, was the statesman who passed to his reward late last night upon the full completion of such heroic work for the Republic as it has been the privilege of but few of her sons to perform.

One would have said ten years ago that Henry Cabot Lodge's work was nearly over, that while he might remain in public life as long as he wished it probably would be as interested observer and intelligent commentator rather than the doer of deeds. How little we know!

He was well into the middle 60's when, as Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, he was called upon to face the League of Nations proposition and on this greatest issue of our time took the true American position.

For three or four bitter and irritating years he was abused by internationalists, sentimentalists and propagandists as few men have been abused in the life time of the nation.

His great speeches and his illuminating public addresses, in the nature of things and in the course of time, will be forgotten. Some of his books may live long after the words "Republican" and "Democrat" have come to mean as little to the average citizen of the future as "Whig" and "Federalist" mean to us. But the memory of his victorious fight for a United States of America free and independent of all foreign entanglements will be fresh and new and inspiring while the nation endures.

He was old when he first went to Washington as a Member of Congress, and promptly joined the ranks of the Civil Service reformers, and, because Civil Service reform was at that time unpopular, his opponents referred to him sneeringly as "the scholar in politics." Wasn't he a Harvard man? And didn't he come from Boston?

Well, he WAS a scholar and he WAS in politics.

It was customary to look upon Mr. Lodge as a "reactionary." Certainly there was nothing of the "radical" about him, but no one reviews the record of his activities in Washington one comes upon many marks of the progressive.

Early in his Congressional experience he introduced a bill for the establishment of Postal Savings banks.

He introduced the FIRST National Child Labor law.

He voted for the Sherman Anti-Trust law.

He supported the Pure Food law.

He voted in favor of a proposal to compel the Chicago packers to submit their buildings and their product to Government inspection.

And let none of us forget that, as a member of the House Committee on Naval Affairs more than thirty years ago, he helped to pass the act which gave us the Indiana, the Massachusetts and the famous Oregon, our first three battleships.

From that day until the day of his enforced retirement, he did all that one man could do to strengthen and build up the American Navy.

Now that he is gone the country and his fellow citizens, as is the way of the world, will begin to appraise him at something approximating his true worth.

A second referendum has just been taken on the greatest achievement of this great American chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations. Millions of his fellow-citizens again have returned the verdict, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

With that verdict, he died in serene contentment.

May he rest in peace!

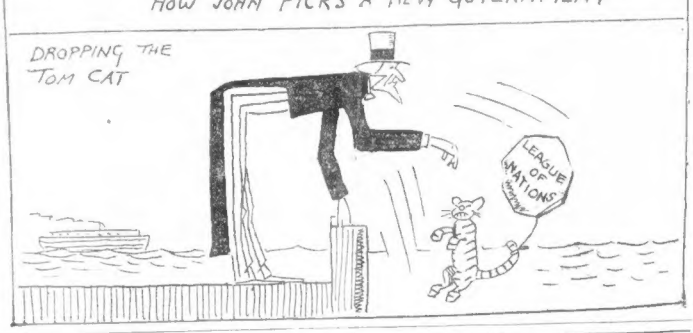
HOW JOHN PICKS A NEW GOVERNMENT



Be Prepared for This Roll Call

And Make "Present" Mean Something

Every once in a while we open our newspapers to read with horror that some city, or township, or county far away from us has been visited by flood, fire or tornado.

"Eleven hundred families have been rendered homeless by the visitation," the early bulletins tell us.

"The dead will number 1,146, the injured at least 3,500."

After that, the formula is a familiar one.

The Mayor, or the sheriff of the county, calls upon the Governor of the State for troops, to protect property and restore order.

Brief stories of the community's distress are telegraphed to the chief executives of hundreds of cities throughout America. Subscription lists are opened.

By generous and abundant help is on the way long before the first guardsman has left home or shop to hurry to the armory and wait for a train to be made up.

Long before the first dollar has been contributed to the Mayor's Relief Fund, in Camden, Coshocton, Chicago or Cheyenne, a news dispatch is on the wires with the reassuring story that, within an hour or two after receipt of first news story that, within an hour or two after receipt of first news story of the disaster, the American Red Cross has dispatched relief trains to the stricken section with surgeons, nurses, hospital supplies, food and clothing.

These trains are followed by others. Until the town is on its feet again the Red Cross is with it constantly.

There are no two opinions in America about the American Red Cross.

Here, at long last, is ONE thing we are ALL agreed upon, Protestant, Catholic, Jew; Republican, Democrat, Progressive.

"Great organization, the Red Cross!" we say.

"Best in the world!"

"Marvelous, how it is always on the job!"

How many of us think of our own responsibility in the situation?

How many of us ask ourselves where the money comes from, with which the Red Cross performs its corporal works of mercy?

The answer to that question is, of course, that the money comes from THE PUBLIC.

The more money WE give to the Red Cross and the more cash there is in the Red Cross strong-box, the better able will it be to do big Red Cross things in a big Red Cross way and do them IMMEDIATELY.

YOU believe in the Red Cross, of course, EVERYBODY does.

Demonstrate that faith, sometime between Armistice Day and Thanksgiving Day, by signing up as a member.

The Eighth Annual Roll-call period opens on November 11th and closes on November 27th.

Sixteen days. But DON'T wait until the last one.

There shouldn't be any doubt about where Boston stands. The Red Cross enrollment in this town this year should be as big as the Coolidge, Davis and La Follette votes combined. Give and be happy!

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By HELEN ROWLAND

VERILY, my daughter, there are three things which are a weariness to mine ears, and four which are an addition to my sorrow.

The weakness of the tired husband.

The chatter of the flapper.

The vanity of the vamp.

And the gush of the bridge-player.

Yea, verily, I have seen a perfectly good man lose his temper and his wife because he couldn't find a collar-button.

I have seen a man's whole day ruined because he couldn't get a shoe-horn.

I have seen a man's whole evening spoiled because he couldn't find a match.

Yea, I have seen a man lose his job because he couldn't find a clean shirt.

Yet, whereforc, because a man is "cranky and pernickety" should he take credit to himself because he considers nothing but the sporting page and the comics and eateth his pie with the wrong fork?

Whereforc, because he is healthy and has a good digestion, shall he be proud and because he glorifyeth the flesh-pots and despiseth the bores?

Whereforc shall he be proud because he preferreth a good dinner to a well-spiced quarrel and goeth about the world all afternoon without a collar and a shave?

Wherefore, because he hath good health, shall he take pride in and be puffed?

Oh, lo! If this be a "He-Man" then would that he were more dissipated and LESS "HE."

Verily, verily, a womanish man is an abomination; yet, every damsel yearneth for a man who can snap her hand without shattering the fingers and kiss her without disarranging her illusions.

Every damsel sighteth for a man who SO "understandeth" her that he is sympathetic with a woman's temperament and considereth her whims and idiosyncrasies.

Every woman longeth for a man who performeth tender, thoughtful services with grace and delicacy and with how to console her when she is cast down.

Every woman pineth for a man who doth NOT get upset on meeting who thinketh more of manners and cross than of roast beef and of not timent than of his FOOD.

Yea, verily, every woman yearneth for a man with a finer sense of humanity and an understanding heart.

And, wherefore, because a man remaineth more of Spring lamb than of the Spring horse, is called (not) frequent above Kings, shall he be called "Dudley"?

Every woman is not a masculine affection; but a man can be TOO "HE" for endearment.

SELAH.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

I LOVE the laced, yellow page,
The binding worn with years;
And relic of another age,
Of others' fancies and fears.

Of others' tears and fancies, too,
Eager eyes that read these sheets
When new were closed in odes and threnodies, beneath the dust and dew.

And careless thou of any song by any poet made, asleep, while slow years march along, beneath the willows shade.

The hands that claimed the treasured book, the voice that spoke, my grandparents' happy laugh, the genial, kindly all lost, down time's dim vista sunk. And yet, I now each yellowed page for something here I find that can my restlessness assuage; which life has been unkind. The old books wait, so still, so wise, amid the passing show untouched by woes or comedies while men rush once and go.

The more one appreciates great men the more one finds that they are men.

* * *

When gold will is taken away the name of friendship is gone.

* * *

You can only govern men by serving them. The rule is without exception.

Letters Not Answered Personally. No Attention Paid to Telephone Calls or Anonymous Letters. No Names Published

Live in Damp Basement

Helping Hand Editor:

I am the mother of four children, three boys, seven and six years and four months old, and a girl three years of age. I lost my husband about two months ago and he left no insurance or anything for me to live on. I cannot go out to work because the baby refuses to take a bottle and besides I have my mother-in-law living with me and she is old and not well. I live in a basement which is awfully damp, and I cannot afford to buy coal all the time. I hope some kind readers will help us out. Two of the children are going to school, and I try my best not to let them out on account of their clothes.

MRS. A. B. L.

For Boy of Two

Helping Hand Editor:

Will you please send me the address of someone who has a little boy two years of age who is in need of the following things: Coat, sweater, blouses and shirts?

MRS. F.

Many thanks for your generous offering, Mrs. H., deserted mother of two young children, one the age you mention, will be so glad to get these things.

Wants Sewing

Helping Hand Editor:

I wonder if you will help me to help myself? I would like to get some sewing to do—children's and girls' preferred. I can make any style with a pattern. Would rather do the sewing in my home, as I have to get lunch for my school children at noon. Hope someone will give me a trial, as I can show them better what I can do than tell them. Would like to get sewing around Quincy or Wollaston, as I could go and get it better than far away, although I would gladly do it if they would mail same from Boston.

MRS. E. D. E.
East Braintree.

Five "Kids" Want Help

Helping Hand Editor:

My papa has read to us about the way you have helped so many who have been in need. I am writing to see if you will help me five kids. My papa is not well and can only do light work and does not get much money. My mother is in the hospital and will be there for some time now. I am a boy nine years old and three brothers, seven, four and 2½, and a sister five. We have no clothes or shoes and are not able to go to school. Papa has to stay home now to take care of us, and we have got to get out of our home in ninety-eight hours, as the rent is away back. If you can find some kind readers to help us until we get on our feet again we may then be able to help someone some time who may be as badly off as we are now.

CHARLEY S.

No Income at All

Helping Hand Editor:

I am a poor widow with no income whatsoever. I have doctors' certificate as to my health and am unable to work. My only hope of support is my son, eighteen years of age, now at sea on a tramp steamer. Will someone kindly help me to meet my rent and enough food to keep me alive until my boy returns, not later than February?

MRS. O. R.

Needs Sewing Machine

Helping Hand Editor:

Among your kind readers perhaps there is someone who has a sewing machine not in use at present who would be willing to give or lend it to me. My husband is a chronic invalid, and I am not strong enough to do any kind of work but sewing. At present I am hiring a machine at a small amount per week, but I need all the money I can earn for bare living expenses, not to mention medicine for my invalid husband. I would be so grateful and happy if some generous readers would respond to this appeal.

MRS. O. J.

Wants Thread

Helping Hand Editor:

I wonder if there are some readers who have odd spools or bits of silkteen, silk or any embroidery thread, any color, that would help to pass on to an old lady of eighty-seven who has not been out of doors for over twelve years, yet is cheerful and uses the silkteen to sew holders and little things which she sells to help her time and help pay her way. Thanking you,

MRSNA G.

WRECKERS OF IDEAS AND THINGS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THERE is a class of people who make a living out of wrecking, or beach combing.

They lie in wait for ships that have been wrecked and gather up the fragments that have been strewn on the shore.

They are reminders of a certain kind of people that are met everywhere. Their business is to tear down, to destroy, to remove the waste. We even have them in the animal life and a large part of the insects and of the furry and winged wild things get their living by destroying other things or by handling the waste products.

An animal does not lie dead very long before the insects and carrion crows are at work removing the flesh from his bones and he is never left until his bones are white.

A certain part of the human race are wreckers.

The butchers take animal life in order to supply food for man.

The wood choppers fell trees and remove the growth from the land in order to make room for human habitation.

Undertakers remove human beings from the scene of their activity and scavengers remove the waste.

There are wreckers of ideas as well as of things. Some men seem to be gifted with the spirit of perpetual denial. They oppose, tear down, and destroy other men's beliefs. Perhaps it is necessary to do this in order to remove the growth of superstition and possibly some good goes along with the bad. It is difficult to tear down evil without, at the same time, destroying that which is good.

Wreckers have their place in the human economy. There is no bread without the destruction of grain, and most of our clothes are raked from the backs of animals.

As we look at the whole drama of human life we are minded of the Irish story of Orchil who sits under the earth and continually weaves, weaving life upward and death downward.

For man must pass and it is as necessary that he should die as that he should be born.

UNIVERSE TAKEN AS A BUBBLE

By Garrett P. Serviss,
Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

LUDWIG SILBERSTEIN is perhaps the leading American developer of what is generally called the Einstein theory of the universe.

Dr. Silberstein's ideas, as presented to the British Association at Toronto, are as fine a specimen of transcendental mathematics as could easily be found. By combining the mathematics of common sense with the mathematics of the imagination, he produces a calculation of the length of the longest possible straight line that could be drawn in the universe, and it comes out in astronomical units as a hundred and eighty million light-years, which it may be remarked, for the sake of a picturesque sentence, are equivalent to about one thousand quintillions of miles!

The interpretation of this remarkable calculation is still more picturesque, and may be put thus: If you could see in a straight line of the Einsteinian kinds, twice a thousand quintillions of miles, your line of sight would strike the back of your head!

This sort of thing, it may be remarked, was roughly worked out by Professor Simon Newcomb many years ago, long before the world had ever heard of Einstein, but Professor Newcomb never made a whale in the clouds for a whole from the sea.

The basis of the whole thing is the "fourth dimension of space," assumed to be what ordinary mortals call "time." Out of this has been constructed the notion that the universe is a cyclorous kind of sphere, which is at the same time without bound and yet limited!

Its sphericity is inherent, inside and out, so that nothing can be really straight in it (which many are ready to believe without mathematics), and every apparently straight line eventually returns to its beginning—like a kitten chasing her tail. The latest contribution is a calculation of the greatest length of the cosmos.

Of course, it requires a special education to be able to understand these things, just as it takes a special education to be able to play golf; golf is a great game, and so is this kind of mathematics.

A favorable illustration, or attempted illustration, of the universe infected with "sphericity" is this: We are soberly told that the idea is quite familiar to us, though we don't ordinarily recognize it, in the spherical form of the earth.

"The straightest line on the earth," they tell us, "is a great circle. Start out from any point in any direction, and travel as straight as you can, and you can never get more than 12,000 miles away. If you walk further in the same direction you get nearer home. The earth's surface has no end and no center, for it is curved spherically in the third dimension."

All true; but the surface of the earth is not the earth—it is only the boundary of the earth, now outward in the form of a ball. Nobody, since the discovery of the spherical form of the earth, has ever been so foolish as to suppose that a line drawn over its surface was straight in every sense.

But common mathematics enables us to deal perfectly with this. It ignores not the slightest suggestion of a fourth dimension. There is no inherent sphericity in the earth's curvature. We can drive a straight tunnel through it. A plumb line points straight toward its center of gravity.

When we travel half way round the earth we are about twelve thousand miles from our starting point by the straightest line we can draw on its surface, which is a curve, but we are only eight thousand miles from it by a true straight line through the center.

The spherical curvature of the surface does not affect the straightness of a line drawn through the center; nor the straightness of a line drawn through a telescope from the surface of the earth to an object above it, or in the sky.

If, then, the spherical form of the earth is to have any significance as an illustration of an inherently spherical universe, it can only serve to indicate that the universe is a bubble with nothing inside of it and nothing outside of it—not even space!

ONCE-OVERS

THE HIGH COST OF MAKING AN IMPRESSION.

Is it not foolish for you to spend beyond your means just to make a lot of people in the assemblage where you happen to be that you are more than you really possess?

Often you have returned from an evening of fun and you have been obliged to do a little figuring when you have realized how much more money you spent than you really could spare for recreation.

You have resolved never to be so foolish again, but under the same or similar circumstances you follow the same course.

In a year's time the sum you spend foolishly would make a snug little nest egg and, added to your bank account, would increase it to a tidy sum.

By the way, how much have you added recently to that bank account?

You remember that you pledged yourself solemnly to be regular and constant in your savings, but have you done it?

What good does it do to convince your friends and acquaintances that you are richer than you really are?

Do they like you better for it or does it make you the target for many more demands on your supposedly big income?

You'll have to stop now, for you are headed towards a financial wreck.
